Rotten Business Says Bailiff

(Fourth in a series on You and Your Debts)

By PETER BRUTON

"Repossessing goods is a rotten business."

This is the view of a registered bailiff in Victoria whose job is to go and take back merchandise which people cannot meet payments on.

There are three or four such bailiffs in Victoria.

"I'd say 99 per cent of the people we have to seize goods from are not crooks," said the bailiff, who asked that his name not be used. "But there are some real crooks in that remaining one per cent. They're out to get you anyway they can."

There are, he said, three types of people when it comes down to repossession.

A Good Guy

The first type is usually a good guy who was high-pressured into buying something he couldn't afford. He's had a hundred letters and appeals from the company and knows the goods will be repossessed. He just gives them up to the bailiff.

"Then there are the booze artists," he said. "A lot of these booze artists will co-operate with you in every way when they're sober. When they're drunk they'll do anything to keep the merchandise.

"The third broad type—usually an out-and-out crook—is the one who has been through the run of the mill so many times he knows all the angles," he continued. "Then the only thing you can do is to get a court order and let the sheriff go and seize the goods."

Back to the Bus

Cars are the item most often repossessed.

"They seem to take the attitude of: 'Okay, we'll ride the bus, but we're going to hang on to the television set no matter what happens'," said the bailiff.

Few television sets or washing machines are seized but deep freezes "come back plunk. People don't need them that much."

The long arms of repossession stretch out like an octopus.

A few months ago a car was seized here after a bank in Norfolk, Virginia had traced it through dozens of states across the continent. The owner of the station wagon had taken a bank loan on it in Virginia, then skipped to South Carolina where he got new plates and then across the U.S. until finally he was located at a downtown hotel here. The car was seized, taken to Seattle, sold and the money sent to the Virginia bank.

Run for Money

"It's a very tactful business—it's not something you go into bullheadedly," said the bailiff. "If you get tough the people you're dealing with get tough. The majority of people are those who just got in above their heads through high-pressure salesmanship. They know the goods will be seized nd take the attitude of 'Well, let's hang on to it as long as we can and when the bailiff comes he can have it'."

What can be done about too much credit buying?

"We've got to let the people learn to save," he answered. "I think it gets down to the old system of insisting that purchasers have an equity in the goods they want. They should be forced to pay one-third down and then they'll make sure they keep up the payments."

Bailiff Unhappy, Too

There are three types of people when it comes down to repossession, says a Victoria bailiff, but when wage earners do not meet their payments repossession is inevitable.—(Colonist photo by Jim Ryan)

Aroused Union Men March on Lansdowne Moonlighters

Protest against "moonlighters" came to a head yesterday when building tradesmen, waving placards, marched to Lansdowne subdivision to picket and berate "moonlighters" working on housing projects. They even jostled cars of some immigrant week-end workers. See story on page 15.—(Colonist photo by Ted Harris.)

New Colwood Racetrack Lease To Be Signed in Two Weeks

$1,000,000 Deal Includes Fair Site

Final details are being hammered out in a long-term lease of 130 acres of Colwood land that will become the site of a $1,000,000 Class A exhibition ground and racetrack.

* * *

Negotiations are nearing a windup between the national defence department, which owns the land, and the B.C. Agricultural Association, which wants it.

TERMS BEING STUDIED

Defence Minister George Pearkes, here over the weekend, said yesterday, "the department is prepared to lease the property . . . and terms of the lease are now being studied."

Alex Hill, secretary of the BCAA, said signing of the lease "could be within a couple of weeks."

Mr. Hill said "another party" than the BCAA would be operating the racetrack, under a sub-letting basis. He said more than one concern was interested.

WILLING TO LISTEN

"We are not in a position to dicker with anyone yet . . . but the minute we have the lease we are willing to listen to anyone."

The Colwood Chamber of Commerce will have 10 acres of the land, to be devoted to community activities.

Mr. Hill said it would "probably be a year before we get going," with much building to be done and fair dates to be arranged.

He termed it "a very big undertaking" with "hundreds of thousands of dollars to be spent on the racetrack, grandstand and barns alone."

INTERESTED GROUPS

The Island Turf Club Ltd., which sought to build a race track at Beaver Lake, is interested in providing the race track. It also is known that the Randall interests, which operate the Sandown track at Sidney, are actively interested.

DEFENCE MINISTER PEARKES

Pearkes To Run Again

Defence Minister George Pearkes will run again in a general federal election he expects to be held "early in the year."

Mr. Pearkes, 70, spiked, at least temporarily, Ottawa-based rumors that he was destined for a Senate seat, in an interview at his home here yesterday.

The minister of the young and outnumbered Conservative government said also:

1. He was "quite prepared" to look into "moonlighting" by civilian and service HMC Dockyard personnel, but thought it would be "very difficult to regulate;"

2. A west coast shipyard, possibly in Victoria, will receive a contract for construction of a department of transport rescue ship;

They're Smarter—Scientist

Let Women Run World Properly

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — A British-born scientist claimed last night the world would be better off if it were run by women because they are smarter, stronger and healthier than men.

"It is highly desirable that women be given the free rein they deserve," Dr. Ashley Montagu told 500 members of the Madison Civic Club.

Montagu denounced an assertion that the business of a democracy is business and said, "The business of a democracy is in making warm, loving human beings.

"The female conception of love is the highest form of human intelligence," the leading anthropologist went on. "This is the most important adaptive quality in human beings—the ability to relate yourself in a warm, loving manner to other persons."

Montagu said men were more like gorillas when it came to love, and added that if man stopped repressing women and let them run things, they would work out co-operative solutions to the world's problems, instead of building intercontinental weapons of violence.

A graduate of the University of London, Dr. Montagu was chairman of the anthropology department of Rutgers University of New Jersey, and later served as a consultant to the United Nations.

'Ready to Die'

Prince Severs Red Ties

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP)—Premier Prince Norodom Sihanouk yesterday disclosed he has turned against the Communists he previously had patronized. He charged in a speech delivered eight days ago but made public only yesterday that the Communists he allowed to flourish "are going to cut my throat, but I am ready to die for my country."

Western circles here regarded the development as one of the most important for the free world in Southeast Asia in years. Prince Sihanouk is the dominant political personality in this former French possession in Indochina. He abdicated as King to become premier. At times he retires from that post to serve only as leader of his Popular Socialist Communist party. No matter what job he occupies, he remains the leader of the country.

The prince has summoned home his ambassador from Moscow and taken steps to stop propaganda from the Soviet Embassy and Communist Chinese trade mission here.

In Pentagon

Knock Heads Together!

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Lyndon B. Johnson (D-Tex.) said yesterday that action to "knock some heads together" at the Pentagon might produce more missiles.

The Democratic leader of the Senate said such firm action might be more effective than a reorganization of the Defence Department.

Johnson, who heads the Senate Prepardness subcommittee investigating the missile program, told reporters he foresees "considerable difficulty" ahead in President Eisenhower's announced plans to reshuffle the military system.

"It may be that what is needed is a determined effort to knock some heads together rather than new organizational charts."

Gem Heir From B.C.

KELOWNA (CP) — Percy B. Williamson, brother of the late South African diamond millionaire, Dr. John Thorburn Williamson, is winging his way to the rich diamond mines where the 52-year-old Canadian died earlier last week.

Percy came here quietly last September from Ontario to retire, and slipped out of town last week with the minimum of publicity. Despite denials from his household, it was confirmed here Saturday night that he is travelling via British Overseas Airways Corporation to South Africa.

There was no excitement around the Williamson household in Kelowna, a modest one-storey structure. Neighbors expressed surprise that they lived beside the brother of a millionaire.

New Spending Wins Favor

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower's request for authority to spend more than half a billion dollars on new emergency space age defences this year won quick preliminary approval yesterday in the House armed services committee.

Near-Blast at Trail

Ignited Bombs Found in Show

TRAIL, B.C. (CP)—Police continued investigations last night into the planting of homemade bombs in crowded theatres at three West Kootenay cities Friday night.

None of the bombs, each containing five sticks of dynamite, exploded. They were found in the Odeon Theatre here, the Civic Theatre in Nelson and the Castle Theatre in Castlegar.

Police believe the bombs were left shortly before the last movie shows ended. There were about 1,500 people in the three theatres at the time.

HAPPY NEW YEAR

Two of the bombs—at Nelson and Castlegar—were wrapped in Christmas paper. The one at Nelson carried a "Happy New Year" greeting card.

RCMP analysts were attempting to trace the makers of the bombs.

"We are probing all lines of investigation, including Sons of Freedom Doukhobors," one officer said. The Doukhobors were blamed for a series of bomb attacks in the Kootenays some years ago.

"Five sticks of dynamite going off in a crowded theatre would have been a terrible thing," a trail officer said.

"This would have been a disaster if the bomb had gone off. Friday is a big shopping night. Afterwards many people go to the movies."

Police said all three bombs were gone over by fingerprint experts but failed to yield identifiable prints. In each case the dynamite was packed in a can stuffed inside a pasteboard carton.

FUSE WENT OUT

The fuse on the Trail bomb found by a cleaning woman apparently went out after burning for a short time. It was not known if the fuses at Nelson and Castlegar were lit. Each bomb carried what police described as a four-minute safety fuse, attached to a detonator.

The Nelson bomb was found in the back row of the theatre by a janitor. Investigators found three bottles of beer on nearby seats and said the bomb had apparently been carried inside a paper bag from the beer parlor.

Women Over Forty Worst Drivers of All

LONDON (AP) — Women over 40 make the worst drivers, the British Institute of Advanced Motorists reports.

It issued figures yesterday compiled from more than 8,000 advanced tests in driving, and noted that women over 40 were the only group in which more drivers failed than passed.

The institute was set up 18 months ago to promote a higher standard of driving than is necessary to pass the normal British driving test.

ALL ABOARD

With G. E. Mortimore

The story of a feud between a small black dog and the whole of Oak Bay police department has been passed to me by a denizen of the 2600 block Currie Road.

This is a black tattered spaniel—the kind of dog which, if he were human—would wear a leather jacket. He's one of the bunch that hangs about a certain fence, drooling at a cute little teen-aged hound whose owner won't let her loose.

The rest of the dogs go away sometimes. But this one stays there day and night, barking for the girl to come out, like a persistent lout honking the horn of his jalopy.

People didn't like the noise. They phoned the SPCA and the police. After a while a cop arrived. He tried to coax the dog into his car, while a group of hostile small boys looked on with unconcealed contempt.

The policeman retreated. A few days later, another harness man arrived. "Lure him into the car with a dog biscuit," suggested an onlooker. It worked. The dog was in the car. The policeman closed the door on it. Then he opened a front door to climb in himself.

Dog Whizzed Past

A day or two later an SPCA representative — determined to end this bungling — rolled up in a van. As he drew up to the curb, the small dog was there to greet him. Then the dog took off down the street, grimly pursued by the official, on foot, with the usual string of small fry, mounted on a variety of vehicles, trailing happily along in the rear. Soon afterwards the SPCA man was seen to drive off, alone.

The dog kept barking. The residents made some more telephone calls. Finally the Oak Bay police chief arrived with another gendarme and the SPCA man.

The three stalwarts cornered the accused in an open space near the sea. There was a flurry of boots, uniformed arms and black hair. What happened next isn't any too certain. But after that, the dog was missing from his station by the fence.

Until the next morning, that is. At first light, householders of the district were dismayed to see their bete noir back, happy, noisy and in fine health.

Burst of Calls

The Sabbath calm of Oak Bay police station was disturbed by another burst of phone calls. Another policeman was dispatched.

The dog smelled this one coming, and vanished around the corner. The new man seemed to think that he was on the trail of something large and vicious, and looked surprised when he heard the description.

He accepted a housewife's offer of a slice of meat loaf as bait. While she went in to get it, the policeman talked things over with a bystander—and the dog squeezed under a fence, looked back shrewdly at the uniformed shape looming a few feet away, and bolted down the road.

By the time the law started the car and roared in pursuit, without the meat loaf, the fugitive was out of sight.

According to the last report, he is back patrolling the old stretch of boulevard. Now he has quietened down. He utters scarcely a bark all day.

No doubt this is the silence of a confident dog. He has proved himself. The same cannot be said of Oak Bay police department.

U.S. Tariff Hike Could Be Fatal

Fish Industry in Peril

OTTAWA (BUP)—Two front-line Liberal members yesterday called on the Conservative government to put strong pressure on Washington to prevent an increase in United States tariffs against Canadian fish products.

Speaking in the Commons on a debate on the fisheries department's $17,200,000 appropriations for the 1957-58 fiscal year, both former fisheries minister James Sinclair and former immigration minister J. W. Pickersgill warned that government action such as the proposed 15 per cent diversion of Canadian purchases from the United States to the United Kingdom could easily result in such increases in the tariff and quotas on Canadian fish exports.

Sinclair said that no other industry in this country was so dependent on the U.S. market. More than 50 per cent of this country's fisheries produce goes to the American market, he added.

There is in the United States, he said, a "very powerful" lobby urging Congress to raise the tariff and quotas. Congress has in fact recommended such action before, he aid, but President Eisenhower has vetoed the proposal.

Sinclair urged Fisheries Minister J. Angus MacLean to continue the pressure on the United States government on behalf of the fisheries industry so that, if the U.S. tariff commission should again recommend increases, the president will continue to veto the proposals.

'Election Soon'

Pearkes to Run Again

3. It would be "several months" before a decision is made on what shipyards will build two new navy destroyer escorts;

4. A former senior RCAF officer was quite wrong in recent statements that a "conspiracy of forces" in the United States is forcing the use in Canada of millions of dollars of equipment made in the U.S. that could be produced in Canada.

Mr. Pearkes said there was "a very good chance there will be an election early in the year" and he would be "rather surprised" if the Liberals, turned out by the Conservatives by a slender majority last June 10, should come back in.

Mr. Pearkes, who will be running for his fifth term, refused to speculate on any election date. But he said the Liberal party, after electing a new leader next week, could be expected to take over more of the role of an opposition—to oppose.

It provided backing for a hint by Prime Minister Diefenbaker in Ottawa this week, that he would not call an election until his government is defeated in the Commons.

Group Capt. C. B. Limbrick, who retired a year ago as RCAF director of guided missiles and special weapons and of radar warfare, had recently made his statement about the U.S. "conspiracy" to keep down Canadian equipment production and that U.S. security measures were hampering equipment research, development and production.

Mr. Pearkes, quoting defence production department figures over the last five years, said Canada had spent $545,000,000 in the U.S. for arms production and the U.S. had spent $475,000,000 on arms production in Canada.

Of major contracts let by Canada, 88 per cent have gone to Canadian firms, nine per cent to the U.S. and three per cent to the U.K., he said.

"So there is no indication Canada is hog tied to the U.S. . . . I think it clearly shows there is nothing of the sort."

On the security question, he said there is now "a much freer exchange of information than there has been in the past."

Mr. Pearkes said he had received letters from the B.C. branch of the National Association of Master Plumbers and Heating Contractors, protesting Dockyard personnel working after hours in competition against them for "scab wages."

He agreed that "moonlighting" should not be encouraged —"no man should interfere with the livelihood of others"—and he was ready to investigate the situation.

But, he added, "it seems on the face of it a very difficult problem to regulate . . . to say to somebody 'you must do no work in your spare time.'"

He said the transport department was ordering six rescue ships, of an undisclosed size and type, and one would be allocated to a west coast shipyard. Announcement of the allocation may be made soon, he said.

Hancock, memorized English words of the service without an error. In Chinese her name means "Beauty."

Beeps False Alarm

LONDON (AP) — Mysterious "beeps" were picked up by radio monitors in Europe and North America yesterday, but official radio engineers in Britain and Sweden traced the strange sounds to an idling Soviet teleprinter after a flurry of exciting speculation that the Russians might have launched a third Sputnik.

Foreign Communist correspondents in Moscow have been predicting that the Russians intend to launch another artificial earth satellite this month.

But a Swedish government radio engineer said the signals heard for a few hours yesterday morning had been definitely traced to a "typical Russian frequency-shift teleprinter transmitter."

Family Puts Foots First

LONDON (Reuters) — One Foot kicked another Foot in public print yesterday.

Sir Hugh Foot, governor of Cyprus, was accused by his brother, John, of advertising "his intellectual accomplishments, such as they are."

The family fuss was stirred up earlier in the week by an article in the London Daily Mail on the Foot family. Four of the brothers are active in politics, often on opposing sides.

The father, Isaac, former member of Parliament and Liberal party leader, was quoted as saying:

"Sir Hugh was always considered slightly out of step in the intellectual menage . . .

"Even as a child he was independent. Several times when he was 6 or 7 he went off and we found him with the gypsies on the downs — hardly distinguishable from them."

Sir Hugh, 50, protested in a letter to the editor that "this is the culmination of a whispering campaign put about, I am sure, by my brothers."

"They say to any newspaper man who will listen that I am a sort of wild half-wit brought up on the Cornish moors with the gypsies. They suggest that I was shuffled off overseas "because I was clearly unfit to follow their pursuits of the law and politics."

Hugh said he won as many university honors as his brothers and asserted that he is their intellectual equal.

"And as to the gypsies, well I like gypsies," Sir Hugh said. "And who wouldn't make for the moors when the alternative was to endure the insufferable superiority of four Oxford brothers."

Sir Hugh went to Cambridge.

John contended Sir Hugh's letter caused the family "some not unnatural distress and embarrassment." It disclosed, he said, Sir Hugh's two weaknesses: The "readiness to believe idle gossip" and the "monumental arrogance which leads him to assume that we, his brothers, have nothing better to do than discuss him and his affairs with newspaper men."

Pearson Favors Negotiations

Ban A-Weapons, Missiles Russia Urges Scandinavia

(FROM AP REPORTS)

COPENHAGEN — Premier Nikolai Bulganin of Russia suggested yesterday an atom-free zone throughout Scandinavia and Finland.

In a note to Premier Hans C. Hansen of Denmark he said this would extend the proposed zone in Central Europe where atom weapons and missiles should be banned—throughout Northern Europe.

He said that so far neither Denmark, Norway, Sweden—comprising Scandinavia proper—nor Finland has acquired atom weapons.

Bulganin said this might be "an excellent condition for making all northern Europe a zone which is free of atomic and thermonuclear weapons, and this would be a considerable guarantee of the preservation of peace and order in this area."

* * *

In New York last night Lester B. Pearson called on the West to seek "serious and thorough" diplomatic negotiations with Russia on East-West problems.

Canada's former external affairs minister, discounting the value of an early summit conference, urged discussions among diplomats to take up one by one the problems "that create the fears that create the arms that could destroy us all."

"I would like to see a proposal for this kind of negotiation made to Moscow, without any of those qualifying conditions requiring proof of good faith before talks can begin.

"The good or bad faith will soon become apparent as talks go on. And our defensive strength will be maintained while we negotiate. What then is there to lose?"

* * *

Meanwhile, in New Delhi, India, yesterday, Prime Minister Macmillan of Britain told a press conference that a foreign ministers' conference should precede any East-West summit talks.

Macmillan, on the last day of a four-day visit to India, said there must be full diplomatic preparation for such a foreign ministers' conference.

* * *

It is reported from London that the Russian newspaper Pravda has rejected Western suggestions for a foreign ministers' meeting instead of a summit conference as a method of breaking East-West deadlocks.

In an article broadcast by Moscow radio Pravda says a foreign ministers' meeting "would be more likely to heap fresh obstacles in the way of a summit conference."

The Communist party paper says a summit conference could be a success if the countries taking part showed "a sense of reality."

Speed Their Departure

THIS latest talk about the misfit Sons of Freedom being on the point of emigrating to Russia shouldn't be allowed to raise hopes prematurely, nor should it be taken too seriously. Every so often the Freedomites are reported to be ready to quit British Columbia for some place else, but their migration plans have never come to anything yet. And as all or nearly all of them are native-born Canadians, regardless of antecedents, they can't be pushed out of the country no matter how badly they may behave.

It isn't the first time the fanatical sect has professed a yearning to "return" to Russia, a country few if any of them have ever seen but from which their Doukhobor forebears came to Canada more than half a century ago to escape religious persecution. This time, however, there is encouragement for Canadians who would be glad to see the last of the Freedomites in the statement of Mr. Dmitri Chuvahin, Soviet ambassador to Canada, that he sees no difficulties in the way of the advance guard of four Sons now preparing to go to Moscow on an exploratory mission.

The qualities of freedom they seek in some other land are limitless, and include freedom from regimentation in any form, which they are not likely to find behind the iron curtain. One can imagine the kind of handling they would receive from the Russians if they refused to send their children to school and periodically went on rampages, burning buildings, blowing up bridges and generally taking the law into their own hands. In Canada their conscientious objection to military service is respected. They would find things a little different behind the iron curtain.

One thing is certain, though; and that is that if the U.S.S.R. will accept them and if they still want to go there after hearing a report from the four delegates, Canada should go out of its way to facilitate their departure. This should be a federal responsibility because it was the Dominion government which imported these persistent troublemakers in the beginning. But if Ottawa should decline it would be well worth British Columbia's while—bearing in mind the millions of dollars the Freedomites have cost the province already in wilful destruction of public and private property—to pay what it would cost in fares to get rid of them.

Committed to Action

THE Diefenbaker administration has committed itself to action on the federal-provincial hospital insurance scheme commencing on July 1 next, with such of the Provinces as may by then have enacted provincial schemes and agreed with the Dominion on the shared-cost formula. The government's announcement made by Health Minister Monteith in the House of Commons last week was explicit and carefully timed. Changes necessary in existing federal statutes to permit the Dominion to go ahead with three or four Provinces, without waiting for a majority of six of them, will be offered at "the next session." That is, a general election will come first at which this course can be approved or rejected at the ballot box.

British Columbia has been pressing for action. It has had a fully fledged hospital insurance scheme in successful operation for several years, and would welcome a fifty-fifty sharing of the costs by federal taxpayers. Two or three other Provinces, according to Mr. Monteith, may also be able to qualify by July 1. Even with four Provinces this would afford a trial basis for the nation-wide coverage which the Liberals had proposed but did not put into operation. Had the Conservative government attempted to effect the change at this session it would have been accused of electioneering. This way, the administration declares its intention and leaves it to the voters to endorse the actual step.

No cost estimate can be made for the initial application of national hospital insurance until it is known how many of the Provinces will join in the plan. What is obvious is that the Provinces which do so would be relieved of a considerable drain in their present expenditures; and they would be expected to lighten provincial taxation to an equivalent extent.

An Army Immortal

WHEN over the air comes the voice of Peter Dawson intoning "Pick 'em up, pick 'em up, pick 'em up," every old PBI listener almost literally springs to attention. The sergeant-major is on parade and when the sergeant-major is on parade no one dare say him nay. He is the epitome of the soldier's craft. He quivers like drawn elastic, as one writer puts it; although not half so much as the erring recruit who stands before him.

For a good RSM, and few of them are not pukka at their job, is the regiment. He is the exemplar, the guide, the martinet, the mainspring of a unit. There may be a fine regiment with a poor RSM, but never a poor regiment with a fine sergeant-major.

These thoughts are evoked by news of the retirement after 35 years in the regular army of Captain Bill Gardner of the PPCLI. He is a regimental legend. Two years ago he was the dean of Canadian Army sergeant-majors, winning the unique award of promotion therefrom to the rank of captain. That in itself speaks volumes to the initiated.

Captain Gardner began military life as a drummer boy, and at the outbreak of the last war took up the historic role of RSM. He was born to the breed. On parade ramrod stiff, booming voice, proud, loyal, and efficient; off parade friendly and helpful, for the stern air hid a kindly heart. He was of the stuff that makes real soldiers, as the record of the PPCLI well makes clear.

Now this legendary sergeant-major has retired, leaving behind him an aura that will take long to fade. He belongs to the army's immortals, and deserves the thanks of the nation as he leaves the barracks square for the last time.

Thinking Aloud

". . . of shoes—and ships—and sealing wax—of cabbages and kings."

By TOM TAYLOR

WE all have a touch of Micawber in our make up, in the sense that we are always hopeful something will turn up; something good, that is. Dickens knew his father was not alone.

Not a bad trait, this, exactly. In the kind of world we are in today it helps us to keep sane.

By reverse token however, we are equally prone to cross bridges before they come in sight. We summon potential disasters out of thin air. In its own way the Suez Canal is an example of fallacy in this respect.

A year ago the Suez was the hot spot of the globe, and now a Manchester Guardian who has been out there reports the canal to be an oasis of peace and efficiency; his words.

* * *

He is not referring to the potential situation which boiled over when Israel attacked Egypt, and Britain and France intervened, but to the canal itself. After Nasser took over the canal—prior to the military crisis—the British and French pilots resigned.

They departed with dire predictions of the chaos that would ensue without them. It would take months if not years, they said, to train a big enough cadre of Egyptian or other pilots to ensure safe passage of ships through the canal.

They had been at the job for decades, and they knew.

In the result they didn't know, or were more optimistic even than Micawber. The Manchester Guardian correspondent reports that the canal is busier than ever and the net tonnage is higher. The Egyptian pilots haven't run ships aground and Egyptian technical administration has been excellent.

* * *

This, of course, comes a bit unpalatably to the West, which until recently at least has always assumed it was tops in nearly everything. But with earth satellites still roaming the skies it is as well that we cease deluding ourselves.

All the pilots on the Suez are not Egyptian, but these comprise 100 of the 222 which are considered enough. The old Suez company, incidentally, considered the minimum number required to be 250. That is perhaps another leaf to put in our pipes and smoke.

As a waterway for ships the canal is international in its use; so apparently is the pilotage. In addition to the native pilots there are 28 Greeks and 21 Germans. There are 15 Russians—flown in suddenly the day the British and French pilots left the canal—12 Poles, 12 Yugoslavs and nine Americans. The remaining 25 come from nine other countries, including Persia, Norway, Spain and South Africa.

It must be deemed another feather in Egypt's cap that it could weld such diversity into a cohesive whole.

* * *

The canal itself of course now has another aspect. When the blockage a year ago put it out of business it was found not to be an absolute lifeline for Britain after all. A few months and its shipping business, albeit round the Cape, became regular again. For that matter the Suez was long out of commission during the war, surely a supreme test of its value to the West.

Oil tankers grow bigger and bigger and some are too big for the canal. Their number will increase, but as the present Suez traffic emphasizes, this will always be an important waterway.

Anyway, take the implications as you will, the canal is back to normal, in spite of the apprehensions—or hopes—of its former pilots.

De Lesseps no longer gazes out from Port Said, the fellaheen in foolish rage having destroyed him; but at Ismailia the gardens are as well tended and as inviting as ever. That will touch a chord of memory in more than one Victoria heart.

Letter from London

Welfare State Breeds Immorality

By RICHARD L. THOMAS

IF you want to know how the British welfare state works let us take one of the most recent examples. A father earning $5,800 a year had a son who earned for himself a place in an English university. Father applied to his local authority for an education grant and was refused on the ground that his income was in excess of the upper limits allowed to be eligible for a grant.

It seemed that either father had to pay or else the son could not go to the university. But father—and seemingly he is one of many fathers who got the same idea—was determined to get what he could out of the welfare state.

He visited a solicitor. The solicitor drew up a document which legally disowned the son. Once the document was executed the son was a person legally on his own and without means. The son then applied to the same local authority for a grant to enable him to take his place in the university, and he received a greater amount than he would have received had his father been earning a salary within the limits. The reason was that as a person without any resources he was granted pocket money in addition to subsistence allowance and tuition fees.

I doubt if many people in Britain approve the action of the father. Any parent prepared to disown his own flesh and flood for the sake of extracting money from the state does not show very great character. At the least his price is pretty low—but as a means of solving an economic problem without any sacrifice it indicates the type of morality being bred by the welfare state.

It applies in other directions, too. A man and woman both earning a living will nine times out of ten be much better off living together instead of getting married. Assessment as single persons leaves more aggregate income than a joint assessment.

The husband willing to inform a local education authority that he is living apart from his wife will find that his wife is thereby enabled to claim such things as a free school uniform. Indeed there is no end to the assistance the state is prepared to grant to people prepared to defy ordinary standards of decency and morality.

* * *

It is a reflection of socialist theory and practice. Socialist members of parliament imbued with righteous zeal for the downtrodden masses have an amazing faith in human nature. They can be forgiven, perhaps, for not believing that a father would disown his own son for the sake of a state bounty — but events show how innocent they are.

They would never dream that next door neighbors could literally take in each other's washing and by paying a state contribution of approximately $1 a week make the equivalent of $2 a week profit by going unemployed every six months, during which time the process is reversed. But it is happening and it is legal. In terms of cash Mrs. A pays her neighbor's stamp of $1.10 per week. After six months' qualifying period Mrs. B may draw approximately $5.50 a week unemployment benefit—which averages $2.20 a week over the whole year after deducting the premium.

At the end of the period the process is reversed. Mrs. B then pays for the stamp and Mrs. A draws the benefit. In effect it is a means of extracting $2.20 a week for two people for nothing. If the two of them have children and disown them they can also get clothes and university grants.

* * *

The welfare state is becoming a morass in which the perfidy of human nature is at war with the legitimate aspirations of human experience. If the people are queried they will explain that they pay for it—in taxation — which may be partially true, but many pay a great deal less than they put into it. They will argue that they are justified in getting anything they can out of the state and it is painfully obvious that there are no limits to which they will not go.

We have reached the point where a father who understated his income and thereby received a grant would probably go to jail for fraud; but the father who disowns his son is inferentially commended because his son will get a greater grant. It is a sad commentary on human nature.

Perhaps the most surprising thing of all is that despite all the legal loopholes which permit the moral fraud on the welfare state it is still necessary to employ a whole army of civil servants whose only job in life is to make sure that no one swindles the state illegally. It seems that the practice should be outmoded. There are so many legal ways for anyone who takes the trouble to find out.

Good Word for Winter

(From The Wingham Advance Times)

BELIEVE it or not, there are a few nice things about Canadian winter—if you look hard enough to find them. One of the most pleasant we know is the sensation of warmth and security one experiences snugly indoors on a blustery winter night.

Then, if we are at all thoughtful, comes the consciousness of the tremendous blessings most of us enjoy—the warmth, the good homes, the well-made clothes and the ample food.

These are the principal signs of a prosperity which each one of us is all too inclined to belittle.

The Packsack

Of GREGORY CLARK

WHEN we drive on the lesser highways heedlessly through those little almost nameless villages, those relics of villages, we see that the only new buildings are small, neat premises bearing in smart neon or other lights the inscription "Electrical Appliances, TV and Service."

Except for this one modern office, all the rest of the tiny community is in obvious decline. The general store, that used to be the pulsing heart of the village, with everything on sale from sides of beef to overalls, from wheelbarrows to needles and thread, is now a mere dispenser of pop, with a precarious shelf or two of corn flakes and ten-cent combs. The blacksmith shop long ago was engulfed by the handsome service station one of the big oil companies set up, in its own particular image. There is no harness shop, no flour and feed store, no chopping mill up at the end of the village; and even the church looks a little stark.

We all know about the Industrial Revolution. Why bother about the local general store when, in twenty or thirty minutes, you can drive to the nearby town and fill your wants at twenty stores? Blacksmith? What does that mean? Flour and feed? A company truck will deliver it to your barn. Chopping mill? My dear sir . . .

The Industrial Revolution, beginning in 1750, started the destruction of the village. The Transportation Revolution is burying them. All but the "Electric Appliances, TV and Service."

A Century to Celebrate

THIS is a wonderful year for British Columbia, its hundredth since it came in existence as the union of the then nine-year old Colony of Vancouver's Island and the Mainland under the firm, rather despotic rule of Governor James Douglas.

It is indeed a year, a century, to celebrate. From a few small settlements on the fringes of a vast and untapped wilderness the province has become a colossus, wealthy, powerful and civilized though three-quarters of its area is still scarcely populated.

At The Colonist we'll enjoy the many centennial celebrations, and record them, but all the while we'll be thinking of our own birthday which we shall mark appropriately on December 11:

* * *

For British Columbia and The Colonist were born just a month apart and grew up together.

Both were sturdy, vigorous, lusty babies. One was born of furs, gold and the spirit of adventure; the other of an errant, crusading Nova Scotian called Amor De Cosmos; whose name, translated from the three languages from which he adopted it, meant "Lover of the Universe."

De Cosmos, born in 1825 and christened plain William Alexander Smith, left Halifax as a young man and spent a year among the Mormons in Salt Lake City before he moved along to California where he was variously photographer, trader, miner. In May of 1858 he reached Victoria with the gold seekers and seven months later, in revolt against the despotism of Governor Douglas and the tight grip in which the Hudson's Bay Company held the colony, he published the first edition of the weekly British Colonist. It soon became The Daily Colonist and now, 100 years later, is the oldest newspaper west of the Great Lakes.

In his first editorial in Volume 1, Number 1 of the British Colonist (a valuable edition still kept under lock and key), De Cosmos set out the policy of his paper. It's interesting that one hundred years later it might still apply.

* * *

"We intend," he wrote, "with the help of a generous public to make the 'British Colonist' an independent paper, the organ of no clique nor party, a true index of public opinion . . .

"In our local politics we shall be the friend of reform . . . It will be a primary object with us to advocate such changes as will intend to establish self-government . . .

"In everything that concerns B.C. we shall take a deep and permanent interest . . .

"Our industrial resources will find us a warm friend . . .

"In the discharge of our duty, when called to speak of efficiency or inefficiency in any department of the public service, we shall applaud merit and promptly denounce incompetency . . .

"We shall ever be found on the side of law and order . . ."

* * *

De Cosmos, later to become a premier of the province, lived up to his promises with a fighting brand of personal journalism now almost non-existent. In a day when libel laws were virtually unknown his invective and frank reporting of the news built his circulation from 200 to 4,000 in less than three years.

Starting next week in the magazine section, Islander editor John Shaw will review the contents of the corresponding editions of 1859. The old papers still make good reading.

ROBERT W. MAYHEW was named reeve of Oak Bay by acclamation, 25 years ago. He succeeded Reeve Edward C. Hayward.

Mayor J. Mason was re-elected in Ladysmith over the rival mayoral candidate, A. Radford. In Nanaimo, where Mayor John Barsby was unopposed, Alderman Samuel, Joseph Dixon and George Muir were elected to the council.

Port Alberni elected E. A. Jones, Douglas Stone and Archibald McMillan to serve on the council of Mayor Joseph Warnock. Alberni returned Mayor James Motion and its council by acclamation.

Mayor A. Wells Gray of New Westminster was returned to office by a majority of 408 over Alderman Fred Fiume.

The $18,000,000 French luxury liner Atlantique, on her way to Cherbourg for annual overhaul, was swept by fire. Nineteen crewmen lost their lives. Some 200 crewmen were saved. There were no passengers aboard.

NEARLY 170 persons died when a coal oil footlight set fire to a theatre in the little centre of Boyertown, Pennsylvania, 50 years ago.

The victims were burned or trampled to death in the panic to escape through inadequate exits.

Tender-hearted members of the federation of women's clubs, meeting in Winnipeg, pledged themselves not to wear the feathers of any birds other than crows and domestic fowls.

Dr. F. H. Eaton, superintendent of Victoria schools, died suddenly at the home of his brother, L. S. Eaton.

WAS this the origin of the rumor that Victoria pulls in its sidewalks at 9 p.m.?

"The sidewalk on Yates Street has been removed by the contractor for the new engine house," the Daily British Colonist reported, 95 years ago.

"Ever since, it has been almost impossible to get over without sinking to the ankles in mud. The City Inspector should see that a remedy is applied to such a disgraceful state of things."

"The construction of the new stern-wheel steamboat, about to be built for Capt. Moore by Mr. Trahey, will be commenced early in February, at the shipyard upon the Indian reserve where the Reliance was launched.

"She is to be 180 feet long and of much stronger and deeper build than any of the sternwheel boats at present running upon the Fraser, being designed for carrying freight from Victoria to the head of navigation when the depth of water will permit."

"The first greyhound which has ever been introduced to this colony has arrived on board the Helvetia," the Colonist reported.

With the Classics

'At first it seemed a little speck,
And then it seemed a mist:
It moved and moved, and took at last
A certain shape, I wist.
'A speck, a mist, a shape, I wist.
And still it neared and neared;
As if it dodged a watersprite,
It plunged and tacked and veered.
'With throats unslaked, with black lips baked,
We could not laugh nor wail;
Through utter drought all dumb
we stood;
I bit my arm, I sucked the blood,
And cried, "A sail, a sail."

Some Eggheads . . . . . More Equal than Others

Family Puts Foots First

LONDON (Reuters) — One Foot kicked another Foot in public print yesterday.

Sir Hugh Foot, governor of Cyprus, was accused by his brother, John, of advertising "his intellectual accomplish- [illegible] as they are."

The family fuss was stirred up earlier in the week by an article in the London Daily Mail on the Foot family. Four of the brothers are active in politics, often on opposing sides.

The father, Isaac, former member of Parliament and Liberal party leader, was quoted as saying:

"Sir Hugh was always considered slightly out of step in the intellectual menage. . . .

"Even as a child he was independent. Several times when he was 6 or 7 he went off and we found him with the gypsies on the downs — hardly distinguishable from them."

Sir Hugh, 50, protested in a letter to the editor that "this is the culmination of a whispering campaign put about, I am sure, by my brothers."

"They say to any newspaper man who will listen that I am a sort of wild half-wit brought up on the Cornish moors with the gypsies. They suggest that I was shuffled off overseas because I was clearly unfit to follow their pursuits of the law and politics."

Hugh said he won as many university honors as his brothers and asserted that he is their intellectual equal.

"And as to the gypsies—well, I like gypsies. Sir Hugh said. "And who wouldn't make for the moors when the alternative was to endure the insufferable superiority of four Oxford brothers."

Sir Hugh went to Cambridge.

John contended Sir Hugh's letter caused the family "some not unnatural distress and embarrassment." It disclosed, he said, Sir Hugh's two weaknesses: The "readiness to believe idle gossip" and the "monumental arrogance which leads him to assume that we, his brothers, have nothing better to do than discuss him [illegible] paper men."

Beeps False Alarm

LONDON (AP) — Mysterious "beeps" were picked up by radio monitors in Europe and North America yesterday, but official radio engineers in Britain and Sweden traced the strange sounds to an idling Soviet teleprinter after a flurry of exciting speculation that the Russians might have launched a third Sputnik.

Foreign Communist correspondents in Moscow have been predicting that the Russians intend to launch another artificial earth satellite this month.

But a Swedish government radio engineer said the signals heard for a few hours yesterday morning had been definitely traced to a "typical Russian frequency-shift teleprinter transmitter."

Baby Whipping Death House Burned Down

CHOWCHILLA, Calif. (AP) —The house where little four-year-old Sandra Marie Schindler died after a 45-minute whipping by her parents was burned to the ground by its owner.

Ray Flanagan put a torch to the house while Mr. and Mrs. Claude William Schindler were in court on murder charges.

My wife and I decided to burn the place down," Flanagan said. We knew we could never look at the place again."

Car Smashes Bridge Gates

A car yesterday morning ran into the gates on the eastern approach to the Johnson Street Bridge while the bridge was up. The gate was broken but damage to the car, driven by Charles D. Henery of HMCS Margaree, was light, police said.

Pearson Favors Negotiations

Ban A-Weapons, Missiles Russia Urges Scandinavia

(FROM AP REPORTS)

COPENHAGEN — Premier Nikolai Bulganin of Russia suggested yesterday an atom-free zone throughout Scandinavia and Finland.

In a note to Premier Hans C. Hansen of Denmark he said this would extend the proposed zone in Central Europe—where atom weapons and missiles should be banned—throughout Northern Europe.

He said that so far neither Denmark, Norway, Sweden—comprising Scandinavia proper—nor Finland has acquired atom weapons.

Bulganin said this might be "an excellent condition for making all northern Europe a zone which is free of atomic and thermonuclear weapons, and this would be a considerable guarantee of the preservation of peace and order in this area."

* * *

In New York last night Lester B. Pearson called on the West to seek "serious and thorough" diplomatic negotiations with Russia on East-West problems.

Canada's former external affairs minister, discounting the value of an early summit conference, urged discussions among diplomats to take up one by one the problems "that create the fears that create the arms that could destroy us all."

"I would like to see a proposal for this kind of negotiation made to Moscow, without any of those qualifying conditions requiring proof of good faith before talks can begin.

"The good or bad faith will soon become apparent as talks go on. And our defensive strength will be maintained while we negotiate. What then is there to lose?"

* * *

Meanwhile, in New Delhi, India, yesterday, Prime Minister Macmillan of Britain told a press conference that a foreign ministers' conference should precede any East-West summit talks.

Macmillan, on the last day of a four-day visit to India, said there must be full diplomatic preparation for such a foreign ministers' conference.

* * *

It is reported from London that the Russian newspaper Pravda has rejected Western suggestions for a foreign ministers' meeting instead of a summit conference as a method of breaking East-West deadlocks.

In an article broadcast by Moscow radio Pravda says a foreign ministers' meeting "would be more likely to heap fresh obstacles in the way of a summit conference."

The Communist party paper says a summit conference could be a success if the countries taking part showed "a sense of reality."

All Are Ugly

Reading the item in the Jan. 9 Colonist regarding the totem design on the centennial silver dollar made me wonder why the totem should be considered as symbolic of British Columbia.

All these totems are ugly, full of terror of the unknown, and to me, in some cases, really evil. I defy any sensitive person (except an anthropologist) to visit the specimens in Thunderbird Park without a feeling of horror and also of pity for these Indians whose attitude to life is represented by these figures. They are not ancient. I do not believe any totem pole yet discovered in British Columbia is more than one hundred years old.

For a design to stand for our beautiful province, let us use a Douglas fir, a dogwood or an arbutus. All these trees have dignity and beauty, and much more nearly represent British Columbia than a very primitive and grotesque death pole.

Pitlamping Motorists

Considering all the publicity which is given safe driving and the emphasis placed on young people being taught proper procedure on the highways, why is nothing done to curb the ever increasing menace of glaring headlights? How often does one read in the report of a car smash, "I was blinded by the lights of an oncoming car."

This is no flimsy excuse. Many times when driving after dark is a motorist bereft of vision by a car, usually driven at high speed, with both headlights full on, which renders it impossible to see anything on the road ahead.

The wise thing to do is to stop until the offender has passed. That may not be so good if anyone is following, but one cannot have it both ways. Better a bang than some dead on the road. Many folks, not elderly ones either, have said they dislike night driving for no other reason than the reckless thoughtlessness of those who disregard the rights and safety of other road users.

This pitlamping of the cautious and lawabiding driver should certainly come under the heading of careless driving and be dealt with accordingly.

Bouquet for Bus Drivers

I would like to put a word of praise in your paper for our bus drivers. To my mind they have more patience than Job, and could teach some politicians something of tolerance and kindness.

I was so pleased as I am sure the other passengers on our bus were yesterday, when the bus driver (I know him as Scotty) got off the bus at a stop on Douglas Street and helped an elderly gentleman, carrying a white cane, off the bus and across the street, then came back and carried on with his job, as, if it's all in a day's work, but I think he is to be highly commended.

Spirit of Christmas

I think that the Catholic Church is highly to be commended for displaying the Nativity group model at the exterior of the Cathedral. It served to impress passers-by with the true object and spirit of Christmas.

It is often remarked that what should really be a Christian festival has degenerated into a commercial undertaking.

Saanich Assessment

Are we going to lose our homes in Saanich? This is the question many are asking themselves since receiving our new assessment notices.

We were amazed to note that the increase on our improvements was up $1,165. We have made no improvements on our property since we bought it, other than to keep it tidy.

We would very much like to know just what improvements Saanich has made to warrant any increase, never mind such a huge one. There is no sidewalk in front of our home, no boulevard, only an open ditch, which hardly increases the value.

The taxes on the older homes have now reached the ridiculous state of being higher than on the new homes, and they are excessive. At least with a new home, it is easier to resell, easier to obtain a mortgage and less costly for repairs.

It is the long-suffering property owner who provides the money to keep things going. Our money is being squandered recklessly, the taxes getting higher and higher every year. Nothing is allowed for depreciation. When it comes to an increase of $1,165 for non-existent improvements, that is about the last straw.

Why should we be put in the position of losing our homes, for unpaid taxes? Why should we be forced to contemplate moving to Oak Bay or the city, where they are already provided with all improvements, and taxes are lower?

What about people on fixed incomes, who are already besieged on all sides by rising costs? How are they supposed to find still more money?

Bridge Claims Third Life

A drop from 200-foot-high section of Skyway at Burlington, Ont., caused death of Jude Duguay, 28, Niagara Falls, Ont. During high wind he slipped, fell through planking below, dropped into canal. He is the third workman to die on Skyway.

Work, He Found Its Own Reward

WASHINGTON (UP) — No one paid much attention to the painter.

The teachers and principal of Harrison Elementary school thought it was nice, though, to get the place freshened up inside.

It was last Dec. 12 that the painter went to work. He whistled softly to himself and smiled at the pupils while he daubed the walls a standard cream and green.

Every day he returned, not saying much, and moving steadily from room to room.

He even labored until late Christmas Eve and New Year's Eve.

Finally finishing his work indoors, he moved outside.

Last Friday a school repairs supervisor drove by and later complained to the paint superintendent that the painter should have been using window jacks instead of a ladder. But the superintendent said he didn't know anything about it.

Neither did the city contracts section.

Neither did the building and grounds superintendent.

Neither did the school principal.

Nobody knew who told the painter to do the job.

Officials went to look for the painter. But the work, worth about $700, was done. He was gone. He left no bill.

"He seemed like such a nice man," the principal said. "He did an awfully neat job."

Earth's Spin Slowing Down

Days Longer, Numbered

TIDDINGTON, England (Reuters) — British scientists have proved that the rate of the earth's spinning on its own axis is slowing down 50 times as fast as they used to think it was.

This means the earth will come to a dead stop a lot sooner than had been anticipated, and, like the moon, will then always show the same face to the sun. The countries which happen to be on the sunny side will continue to have permanent daylight, while those on the other side will be in perpetual darkness.

But other effects will be less pleasant, because of the complete breakdown of the earth's tidal system and the permanently tropical heat on one side of the globe with an ice-cap on the other. Conditions presumably will approximate to those on the moon, where it is not yet known whether man could survive.

When will this happen? In about 16,078,000,000 years from now, says Dr. Louis Essen of the national physical laboratories, who has spent 2½ years working it out.

He has one of the only two atomic clocks in the world—the other, not yet working is this way, is in Washington—and can measure time down to 1/1,000th of a second.

Essen said he found days now to be 1/1,000th of a second longer than they were two years ago. Previously this increase was believed to take 100 years.

The atomic clock has upset the world of science, because in the past calculations were based on astronomical measurements and theoretical considerations such as tidal friction.

"This is the first time we have been able to measure the length of the days," Essen said. On the previous astronomical observations and theoretical deductions, the earth would have had another 800,000,000,000 years of spinning ahead of it, so someone is going to lose 183,922,000,000 years if the atomic clock is right.

But Essen admits the earth is not completely reliable, and that days have been varying in length even in the same month by as much as 1/1,000th of a second.

His laboratory is in constant touch with London's Greenwich observatory, where the world's mean time comes from. But Greenwich officials, who have kept the official time for centuries now, are a little cold about the discoveries of the atomic age.

The atomic clock may well show, they say, that the days now are longer by 1/1,000th of a second. But, they add, observations during the years have shown the earth to be most erratic.

Crazy Machine Pads the Bills

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP)—An electronic business machine in the state licence bureau went berserk and motorists in two Washington counties got bills ranging up to $700 for their automobile licences.

The auditor's office here got angry demands for a reduction from about 40 car owners.

A licence department spokesman said Friday the business machine had received a wrong punch card and every time a certain 1952 model was processed, the machine turned out bills for $200, $500 and even $700 for licences, instead of about $20.

Officials said corrected bills have been sent to the affected owners.

Electricity Replaces Steam Power

New Lease on Life for Old Mill

By HARRY YOUNG
Colonist Business Editor

A complete change-over from steam to electric power is expected to make an old Victoria mill one of the most [illegible] and efficient in the shingle manufacturing business.

When it closed down last October the mill was powered by a steam plant fired by mill ends and other wood waste. Not only was the operation a smoke nuisance to the area, but it was also only moderately efficient.

Hershell Smith, head of the company, said that it was always a worry to maintain the head of steam so that the shingling machinery could be kept going at full tilt.

Today the old steam plant and its machinery have been dismantled and sold for scrap.

The belts and heavy flywheels that lost much of their potency through friction, have been replaced by neat electric motors for each stage of the shingling operation.

New floors have been installed; walls are painted white, and neon lights provide shadowless lighting.

"We expect to increase production by at least 10 per cent" said Mr. Smith.

By selling mill ends that formerly went into the furnaces, Mr. Smith says the cost of the electrical installation will soon be recovered.

The mill was built in 1926 for the Horton Cedar Manufacturing Company, and it remained with that company until Mr. Smith bought it in 1955. The original seven shingling machines remain and they are still as good as ever.

"They haven't been able to improve upon the design in the past 30 years," explained Mr. Smith.

The strange thing I learned was that although the manufacture of shingles is confined to B.C., Washington and Oregon, the local use of the product is the lowest on the North American continent.

"Less than half of one per cent of our business is in the local market" said Mr. Smith.

However, it is interesting to note that while patent roofings are cornering the general market, most of the better class new homes are having shingle roofs.

"There are a lot of misapprehensions about shingle roofs," went on Mr. Smith. "Some people think they are much more expensive than patent roofs. They are not. But builders like patent roofs because they are easier to apply."

He also said the impression that patent roofs brought lower fire insurance rates was erroneous. "The rates are the same in built-up areas whether you have shingle or patent roofs."

But even if shingle roofs may cost a little more when labor of laying is taken into account, Mr. Smith says the insulating qualities of the shingle quickly save the difference in heating bills.

However, it is mainly in the places where shingles have to be imported long distances that they are most popular.

Ninety per cent of sales are in the United States. Among the biggest users of B.C. shingles are the Texans. They use them for roofing and find they are better insulation against heat, wind and hailstorms than other type roofs.

Also in hot climates shingles have a considerably longer life expectancy than most other [illegible]

Another big market for B.C. shingles is in the eastern states. Here they are used chiefly as siding in Cape Cod type homes.

The Car Corner

High Performance, All the Trimmings

By J. T. JONES

Well, you'd have to scratch the 1958 Pontiac pretty deep to reach the sister that's under the skin, but she's there, all right.

Of course, this cousin-car setup is widespread in the car industry, especially in Canada. There are Ford and Meteor, Plymouth and small Dodge—both pairs of which are much more alike than Pontiac and Chevrolet. What they all amount to (especially Pontiac) is a greater choice of body styles on the same foundation.

* * *

Getting back to the Pontiac Parisienne, equivalent to the Chevrolet Impala, it's a luxurious, all-the-trimmings model with high performance, solid road-holding and notably fine handling.

The one I drove had both power steering and power brakes, neither of which I wholly approve although they're good of their kind. It had the new Turboglide automatic transmission, a smooth improvement on the Powerglide. It has a "grade" setting, to let the engine hold the car back on downgrades, a real brake-saver.

The brakes need all the saving they can get—on this and all the other big sedans. Most of these cars, lots of them heavier than Pontiac, are capable of speeds well over 100 miles an hour. Some of them can top 120. I know of only one or two in which I'd dare brake firmly at even 80 miles an hour, and it's a good question whether any of them could pull down to a complete stop from top speed. Before they stopped, the brakes would fade into uselessness.

* * *

Aside from this common weakness, which the average driver can get around by simply not being idiotic, the Pontiac offers a great deal that is good. It has excellent body rigidity, with the new X-type frame; a solid feel on both good and bad roads; very good cornering, with its new all-round coil spring suspension and rigid linkages locating the rear wheels (air suspension optional).

It also has really pleasant seating position and a real sports-car placement of the steering wheel; quick steering that isn't too heavy even without power assist; easy handling on rough and winding roads; comfortable but not sloppy riding qualities.

* * *

The Pontiac Parisienne is another of those relatively moderate-priced cars that make you wonder what advantage there is in higher-priced cars.

Rare Folding Money to Go on Show

By TED SHACKLEFORD

The only complete set of the first folding money ever issued in Canada—circulated by a Victoria merchant 99 years ago—will be part of a window display in a downtown department store the first week in February.

The notes, eight of them in three denominations— $1, $5 and $10 — — are printed on handmade paper which has weathered the years without yellowing.

Each is signed and numbered by hand. They will be part of a display by Victoria Numismatic Society in a window of T. Eaton Co. Ltd.

* * *

The reason there are eight notes to make up a complete set of three denominations is that different people signed them during the bank's five-year "life."

They were issued by Alexander Davidson MacDonald, a Scottish immigrant who not only noted that the colony had no regular monetary system, but also realized there was no legislation on banking.

So, in 1859 Alex MacDonald opened the doors of a building at Yates and Wharf on March 12, called it a bank, and issued his notes.

The paper money filled a need. At the time common currency in B.C. consisted of Spanish dollars, U.S. gold coins and a conglomeration of miscellaneous copper and silver coins.

Possibly some of the coins issued by the Province of Canada — Ontario and Quebec — found their way to B.C. and Vancouver Island, but the first paper money issued in the country was that put out by the Dominion of Canada in 1870, one year before B.C. joined the rest of the country.

MacDonald's bank did a thriving business but in 1864 it was forced to close when thieves broke in and stole $15,000 in gold sovereigns, $10,000 in notes and some U.S. $5 gold pieces.

MacDonald was not long in leaving Victoria, but he left behind a note saying he was on his way to San Francisco to get assistance. He never did return.

He was manager of a flour mill in Alameda, Calif., for some years and died in San Francisco in 1913.

A highlight of the display in Eaton's window will be the newly-minted silver dollar commemorating B.C.'s centennial — the controversial totem dollar.

Also on display will be other currency allied to B.C.'s history, such as replicas of the $10 and $20 gold pieces minted by order of Sir James Douglas, B.C.'s first governor.

And also to be seen will be bronze, silver and gold-plated copies of Victoria Numismatic Society's special medal made at the Royal Mint, London, England, to commemorate B.C.'s centenary.

Leadership Candidate . . . . . States His Case

'Give Grain to Hungry'

PORTAGE LA PRAIRIE, Man. (BUP) — The darkhorse Liberal leadership candidate from Portage La Prairie, Manitoba, Mayor H. L. Henderson says so long as there is need and suffering and hunger in the world there is no such thing as a surplus of wheat or any other food.

The mayor told a meeting of farm organizations yesterday there is a problem of distribution and of transportation as regards wheat.

"Surely the transportation problem is not greater or more difficult than Dunkirk. We can distribute staple food if we have the mind to do so," he said. "And doing so we can raise the standard of living for countless thousands of people and at the same time give moral leadership."

Henderson, who is also the minister of the First Presbyterian Church in Portage La Prairie, said what the world needs today is moral leadership and he said Canada needs it too.

"The U.S. has lost its position of leadership by the launching of earth satellites. Canada can not hope to match the large nations of the world in military or financial leadership but Canada can and must in this critical hour provide the strongest type of leadership the world has ever known.

"This is moral leadership. This, I believe with all my heart, I can give at this moment in history."

Henderson was asked why other candidates could not give the same type.

"Have you ever seen anything more sickening than to see men of cabinet size taking the attitude that is now being taken by these men?" he replied. "Before June 10 they said the government was unable to provide a pension to old-age pensioners of more than $46 a month. Now they sit in the opposition benches and vote for $55.

"There is something serious here, a serious misunderstanding of the obligations of the government to its senior citizens.

"If Mr. Martin and Mr. Pearson were decidedly of the opinion that the old-age pension should be $55 instead of $46, in moral protest they should have resigned from the cabinet. In a cabinet government there should be complete unanimity."

Henderson blamed the present unemployment situation on the tight money policy of the Bank of Canada. "While trying to even out a boom they brought this situation upon Canada."

The mayor, who is a graduate economist as well as a minister, has argued for the past year that there "could be no real inflation in Canada at a time when capital expansion was going ahead at such a steep rate and when at the same time population was increasing. We haven't even caught up with the housing shortage which existed in the 1930s."

More Guards for Investors

New regulations designed to protect the interests of investors have been adopted by the Toronto Stock Exchange this week.

Except for exempted companies, all those with listings on the TSE will henceforth have to inform the Exchange of any material change it intends to make in its affairs, such as new underwriting, optioning of stock, or disposing of cash assets for properties or securities of dubious value.

The non-exempted companies will have to file statements giving a "full, true and plain disclosure" of their intentions, and the acceptance will hinge on the verdict of the governors of the exchange. If this is granted the company will have to make all particulars available to dealers, the press and the public.

Similar action is planned by the Canadian Stock Exchange in Montreal.

The action has been taken as a result of recent disclosures which have led to prosecutions in the criminal courts.

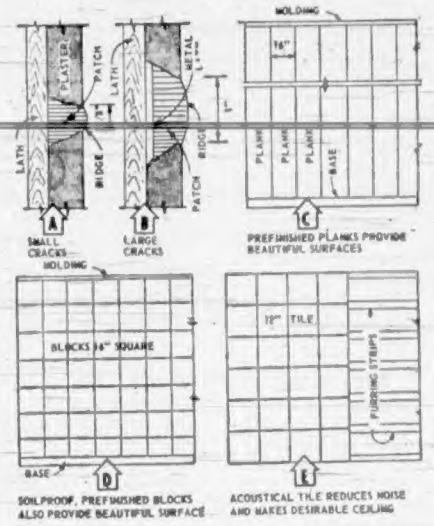
Plaster Cracks an Eyesore

By J. RALPH DALZELL

In many of the older houses and apartment buildings, and even in some of the newer structures, plaster cracks are a constant source of annoyance. The unsightly cracks ruin the appearance of even the best paint and wallpaper decorations, and homeowners continually ask what can be done about it.

Cracks are not the fault of plaster composed of good materials which have been properly applied. Generally, they are caused by settlement and other structural failures which cannot be corrected. Sometimes only a few narrow cracks occur, and then less than a sixteenth of an inch wide. If these cracks do not open and close with the seasons they can be satisfactorily repaired. Where many cracks of various widths occur, and especially if they open and close with the seasons, new surface material should be applied.



Small cracks can be repaired as indicated in picture A. First, use an old chisel to increase the crack width to about an eighth inch. Cut the inside edges to form an inverted "V" as shown. Remove the plaster to the lath. Then patch the cracks with a compound available at hardware stores. Use a putty knife to force the plaster into the cracks, and leave a small ridge. After about a day sandpaper the ridge so it will be flush with the surrounding plaster. Then apply a coat of new shellac.

Large cracks can be repaired as indicated in picture B. Prepare the plaster crack as explained, and tack or nail pieces of thin metal lath to the original lath as shown. Apply the plaster as explained.

When either large or small cracks tend to open in winter and close in summer, particularly where severe winters occur, new surface material should be applied to the walls. This is also the better procedure where a great many cracks exist.

Most paint stores sell a special paint which will fill small cracks and at the same time provide a colorful new wall or ceiling surface. Or, beautiful planks, block or tile can be applied over the old plaster to create a desirable surface. See this new material at lumber yards.

Picture C shows the use of wall planks 16 inches wide and about an inch thick. The planks are prefinished and need only be fastened to the old plaster with nails or an adhesive. Some planks are soil proof and others have a a soft texture.

Picture D shows the use of wall block 16 inches square and about an inch thick. Like planks, the blocks are prefinished and can be fastened with adhesive or nails.

Picture E shows the use of acoustical tile on a ceiling to reduce sound transference. They are usually 12 inches square and about one inch thick, and can be cemented to old plaster. If the plaster is in poor condition, the tile can be fastened to furring strips, as shown.

Whole Council Off to Church

Cranks, Publicity Fans Fighting Fluoridation

How does a public health department work? What does it do?

A series of articles on the subject, prepared by the Victoria-Esquimalt health department, is being published by The Daily Colonist as a public service.

Fluoridation of public water is perhaps the soundest public health measure ever proposed. It has received more intensive, basic study over the last 50 years than most health projects which are recommended and readily accepted by the public.

It has a great number of authoritative experts in favor of it and has been endorsed by the medical and dental professions not only of Canada and the United States but also of many other countries throughout the world. Its effectiveness and safety have been established beyond any reasonable doubt.

In spite of this, there is hardly any person who will actively state that he wants, and wants badly, to have fluoridation in Victoria.

Ill-informed opponents work hard to prevent the institution of this fine method of reducing dental ill-health and have been successful in their efforts. The reasons for opposition to fluoridation are well-known. In many cases opposition stems from publicity-seekers, persons with commercial interests (selling pamphlets and home remedies), misguided champions and food faddists.

These people, either knowingly or not, are denying our children the advantages of this fine health measure. No longer can we turn our backs on a means of reducing dental decay by 70 per cent. Every parent and grandparent should demand that fluoridation be started without delay. It is only by an active interest in fluoridation that your health authorities can institute the means of providing better dental health for children.

All doctors and dentists have, through their professional societies, endorsed fluoridation without a single dissenting voice. Turn to them for advice and they will also advise you to act, and act strongly, in favor of fluoridation.

Each day more than 30,000,000 people on this continent drink artificially fluoridated water. In British Columbia, there are five communities who have started fluoridation and there are several more considering it at the present time. Common sense tells us that this many persons cannot be drinking water containing rat poison or substances that will cause cancer or heart disease, or any of the other silly things attributed to it.

Also, these people can anticipate a marked improvement in their children's teeth over the next few years with no ill effects on their health. They should be commended for their wisdom in starting fluoridation.

Australians have dominated the world swimming scene for the past few years and it's quite likely they'll reign supreme for a few years to come on the strength of the recent feats of the Konrads. It Wasn't Loss That Hit Cougars It Was How It Came About

BY JIM TAYLOR

By all the odds they should have picked up their 10th win of the Western Hockey League campaign. Instead they lost 4-3 to New Westminster Royals, and Seattle Americans are further away than ever.

But it wasn't so much the defeat that hurt. It was the way it came about.

Cougars were ahead 3-2 early in the third and appeared to have things under control, although the Royals were pressing. Then Emile Francis tried to clear a shot from a face-off. Nels Bulloch of the Cougars raced in to help.

HE DIDN'T

He didn't. He pushed the puck past Francis in attempting to get it clear, and the Royals were back in the game. Max McNab, the nearest New Westminster player was given credit for the goal.

That was the beginning of a rough evening for Bulloch, who up until the third period had turned in a solid, hustling effort. Unfortunately, he was also in on the play that gave the Royals their winning goal.

Bulloch and a Royal were on the boards near the Cougar net. The puck was taken away from him, leaving Art Jones, Duke Edmundson and Pat Hannigan home free in front of Francis. The little netminder blocked one shot, but Jones was there to give him no chance on the second.

FAST GAME

The game was one of the fastest seen here this season, and for 3,101 fans it was a treat to watch. The accent was on offence, which both clubs content, especially in the last period, to let the defence take care of itself.

Cougars, in losing their sixth straight game and their 10th in 11 games, more than held their own. For most of the game, it looked as though they were finally going to beat Bev Bentley, the slim and cat-quick netminder who stopped them cold in four straight previous games.

Bently, who doesn't seem to have anything but hot nights anymore, was his usual self against the Cougars. He stopped a total of 37 shots, 16 in the final period and several on clean breaks. At the other end, Francis had to handle 30 shots, and came up with his share of good ones.

COUGARS LEAD

Cougars grabbed an early lead on a goal by Pat Egan with two Royals in the penalty box. However, the Royals reciprocated, scoring after Stan Baliuk and Bulloch went off. Gordie Fashoway got that one, only his sixth goal in the past 20 games.

Doug Kilburn scored at 16.55 of the first period, taking a pass from Ed Dorohoy, who was left wide open in front of Bentley. But McNab came back on a beautiful three-way play with Arnie Schmautz and Arlo Goodwin to tie it again before the period ended.

The pace stepped up a notch in the second period and the game turned into a series of rushes and counter-rushes that had the crowd roaring.

GREAT PLAY

Colin Kilburn made the play of the night, breaking through the defence to take Egan's pass waist-high on the shaft of his stick at the blue line, and knifing in alone to beat Bentley. That put the Cougars up, 3-2. It stayed that way until Bulloch made his mistake.

Egan was shifting his lines considerably, but came up with a couple of fine combinations. Stan Baliuk centred for Gordie Haworth and Blinky Boyce, and Dorohoy pivoted for the two Kilburns. Both lines were constant threats.

Athletics Help by Winning

Proud Moment for Albernis; New Hall Officially Opened

By JIM TANG
Colonist Sports Editor

ALBERNI — Few could have imagined that the day would ever come here that the game would be the secondary attraction on a basketball program. But that was the case Saturday night as a crowd of about 1,500 jammed in for the official opening of the new Alberni Athletic Association gymnasium, situated only a few yards from the weather-beaten old hall which served the Alberni Valley so well for 27 years.

It was a proud moment for district residents, who have for some years now been the most rabid basketball fans in the province. The Athletics, Canadian champions in 1955 and provincial champions in 1954, 1955 and 1957, at last have a home more in keeping with the fine record they have established.

It took two hours for the ceremonies, which preceded the scheduled game between Eilers, leaders of Vancouver Senior A League, and the Athletics, but no one seemed to mind. In fact fans would have gone home quite content with the ceremonies.

It helped, though, that the Athletics did the proper thing by scoring a handy 58-41 victory.

After a few selections by the Alberni District High School band, the new hall was dedicated by Rev. G. H. Greenhalgh. Then followed a parade of speakers who represented basketball at all levels.

The welcoming speech was given by J. Forrest of the AAA and he was followed by Mayor Loran Jordon of Port Alberni and Mayor Jack Luckhurst of Alberni. Joe Polley of Vancouver, president of the Canadian Amateur Basketball Association; Basil Sands of Vancouver, president of B.C. Amateur Basketball Association; R. McKellar of Courtenay, president of the VIABA; E. G. Shorter of MacMillan and Bloedel Limited; and John Williamson, president of Alberni Athletics Basketball Club, all spoke briefly.

More than 100 youngsters, who play in minor basketball leagues in the Albernis were then paraded onto the floor and most of them later got a chance to show the crowd what they could do in a series of five-minute games.

Finally, George (Porky) Andrews, who coached the Athletics for their first three seasons as a Senior A club, threw up the first ball and play started.

Athletics, hitting well from outside right from the start and grabbing a majority of the rebounds, jumped into a 12-0 lead and the game was eight minutes old before Ray Gailloux, a former Alberni youngster, put Eilers on the score sheet for the first time by cashing two free throws.

But Eilers could never get close enough to threaten, although Alberni coach Elmer Speidel gave all of his players action and kept himself on the bench for about half the game. Doug Brinham and Al Brown, both hitting convincingly on one-handers from outside, helped Speidel keep the Alberni club comfortably in the lead.

One couldn't tell from the one game whether or not the new hall will be the scene of the 1958 Canadian basketball finals, but there were few in Alberni last night who didn't think it was a distinct possibility.

Canadiens on Nine-Goal Spree; Wings Boost Home-Ice Streak

Montreal Canadiens, scoring with devastating power for the second straight game, trampled the slumping New York Rangers, 9-3, for their eighth straight victory last night as they boosted their National Hockey League lead to an amazing 19 points.

Marcel Bonon, firey winger who is replacing the injured Maurice Richard on Canadiens' top line with Dickie Moore and Henri Richard, led the rout with three goals and one assist, boosting his goal output for the season to nine.

It was Montreal's second straight one-sided victory and it may have provided Ranger goal Marcel Paille with a ticket back to the minor leagues. New York coach Phil Watson had given Paille a two-game "produce or else" ultimatum.

The flying Canadiens, still missing the elder Richard, Jean Beliveau and all-star defenceman Doug Harvey, routed Chicago Black Hawks, 11-3, on Thursday night and have now scored 20 goals in two games.

During their eight-game winning streak the Habs have piled up 45 goals and only once in the last 10 games have they been held to less than four goals. They beat the opposition by a six-goal spree in one game and scored five in another.

RANGERS SCORE FIRST

New York opened the scoring early in the first period on a goal by Andy Bathgate but the Canyens soon took over and were ahead by 4-1 after 20 minutes of play. The Canyens added four more goals in the second period and the clubs each scored once in the final frame.

Bernie Geoffrion continued his sensational goal-scoring spree last night, counting twice and boosting his season's total to 23. Geoffrion, who got three goals on Thursday, has now scored 13 goals since mid-December.

Also sharing in the point spree were Moore and the Pocket Rocket. Moore picked up a goal and three assists to take over the scoring lead with 50 points. Richard assisted three times and trails Moore by one point in the scoring race.

HOWE INJURED

Meanwhile, Detroit's surging Red Wings, making up for their slow start, scored their ninth straight win on home ice by downing Chicago, 4-1, but lost the services of starry winger Gordie Howe for at least one game.

Howe, working on a streak of 235 straight NHL games, injured his shoulder in the first period and was taken to hospital for observation.

Howe scored his 22nd goal of the season before leaving the ice. Forbes Kennedy, recently traded to Detroit by the Hawks, scored twice and Bob Bailey another ex-Hawk, got the other Detroit goal.

In the third game, Toronto and Boston battled to a 2-2 tie with the Bruins coming from behind in the final period on a goal by Allen Stanley. It was the Bruins' sixth tie in a 14-game slump during which they slipped from third place to an anxious fourth.

Amerks, Stamps in 1-1 Tie; Warriors Beaten by Regals

Seattle Americans wound up their prairie trip with three of a possible eight points last night when the battled the Calgary Stampeders to a 1-1 overtime deadlock in a Western Hockey League inter-divisional game before some 6,000 Calgary fans.

It was the second overtime game in two nights for the Americans, who dropped a 3-2 extra-period decision to Edmonton Friday night. The Seattle club lost to Winnipeg, 7-5, and blanked Saskatoon-St. Paul, 6-0, in other games on their only swing through the eastern division.

Rudy Filion put Seattle ahead at 3.37 of the second period but Dave Duke tied the score less than three minutes later on a pass from Sid Finney.

Dennis Riggin of Edmonton replaced Al Rollins in the Calgary goal and turned in a sparkling performance while Hank Bassen also was outstanding in the Seattle net. Rollins suffered a thumb injury last week but he is expected to return to action Wednesday night.

In last night's eastern division game, the Regals scored two goals in the third period to tie the score, then counted in overtime to edge the front-running Winnipeg Warriors, 5-4, before 3,183 fans at St. Paul.

Bob Chrystal scored two goals for the winners, including the winner at 5.26 of the overtime session. Les Colwill, Don Raleigh and Howie Yackel got the other Regal goals while George Ford netted twice for the Warriors and Earl Ingarfield and Pete Kapusta scored once apiece.

Size Proves Helpful to Little Camille

By BEN OLAN

NEW YORK (AP) — A scrawny-looking French-Canadian youngster who answers to the nickname of "Camille the eel" has become the leading goal scorer in the National Hockey League and he thinks it's because he's a "little guy in a big man's game."

A consistent offensive threat, Camille Henry has racked up 24 goals to move in front of such outstanding stars as Gordie Howe of Detroit and Henri Richard and Dickie Moore of Montreal. He is one of the big reasons why New York Rangers are in second place.

Camille weighs about 149 pounds soaking wet which he usually is after most of the games. Most of his goals are made 10 to 20 feet from the opposing nets where he usually stations himself to await a teammate's pass or a loose puck.

"I figure being light helps me," he said. "I can sometimes squeeze in among the bigger men, get my stick in the way of the puck and get it past the goalie. If I was heavier I might not be able to manoeuvre so well."

There's nothing like success, of course. So Henry isn't hearing much about how important weight is from his bosses, coach Phil Watson and general manager Muzz Patrick.

But it wasn't always that way.

CAMILLE HENRY
. . . size helps

"In every league in which I've played," explained Camille, "they first told me I wouldn't make the grade because I was too light. I started playing hockey in a bantam league in Quebec at the age of 11, then midget hockey at 14, juvenile hockey at 16 and junior hockey at 17 and all I heard was 'weight, weight, weight.'

"In fact when I first joined the Rangers in 1953 that was one of the reasons they sent me back to the minors. That in addition to my limited ability to check the opposing forwards."

Camille is 5-10, 34 years old and a native of Quebec City. He admits he rooted for the Montreal Canadiens and that Maurice Richard was his idol before he joined the Rangers' farm system.

Henry was voted rookie-of-the-year in the NHL in 1954, but a year later he was sent to the Quebec Hockey League and then to Providence of the American League. He rejoined New York last season when he scored 14 goals.

At the start of the current campaign, Camille set 20 goals as his objective.

"Now I am going for 25," he said, "and when I hit 25 then it will be 30 and I hope higher than that.

"I have another incentive now, too. I am getting married in May, so making good in this league suddenly even becomes more important."

Speaking Briefly

Casper, Rosburg Share Lead; Devore Fired as Eagle Coach

ALTHEA GIBSON
First Negro to play tennis on the courts at Wimbledon and Forest Hills and later a winner of both those tournaments, Althea Gibson of New York has been selected as the outstanding United States female athlete of 1957 by an overwhelming vote in the Associated Press year-end poll. Miss Gibson won five major tournaments in 1957 and lost her only singles match of the year to Shirley Fry in the Australian championships. Second to Miss Gibson was professional golfer Patty Berg while bowling champion Marion Ladewig came third.

Solid-shooting Bill Casper slammed into a tie with early leader Bob Rosburg yesterday in the third round of the $50,000 Bing Crosby golf tournament, each carrying a 206 total into today's fourth and final round of the four-day meet.

Rosburg went into the third rund with a five-stroke lead but his putting faltered and he wound up with a two-over-par 74. Casper, playing the tricky Pebble Beach course, fired a three-under-par 69 to pick up the strokes he needed for the tie.

Rosburg and Casper hold a three-stroke edge over the field. Dow Finsterwald and youthful Dave Marr are tied for third place at 209, Finsterwald coming in with a 69. Fifth place was shared by Bo Wininger, Bob Harris, Jackie Burke with 211.

Canadian pro Al Balding missed a good chance to gain when he took a 75. Balding is well behind at 215.

Two World Marks Set By New Konrads Star

SYDNEY, Australia (UP) — The Konrads kids, Australia's great brother-and-sister swimming team of 15-year-old Jon and 13-year-old Ilsa Konrads, bagged two more world records Saturday when Jon swam the half mile in 9 minutes, 17.7 seconds.

The clocking bettered American George Breen's world mark of 9.19.2 for the 880 yards and 800 meters by a full 1.5 seconds. It left only one men's freestyle record—George Breen's 17.52.9 for the 1,500 meters—in non-Australian hands.

Jon swam the distance exactly one minute faster than Ilsa. She grabbed the women's world 880 yards and 800 meter records two days ago with a 10.17.7 clocking.

TRIES FOR MORE

After completing his record swim, Jon announced that he will attempt to smash Murray Rose's 440 yards and 400 meters world records when the New South Wales championships continue next week.

Jon swam the long grind without apparent effort.

When the intermediate time for the first 110 yards was announced—one minute 4.6 seconds—the overflow crowd at the North Sydney Olympic Pool realized that he was out for the world record.

It cheered and whistled him all the way through, and although he briefly slowed down in his 14th crossing of the 55-yard pool, there was hardly any doubt that he would smash Breen's mark.

Jon quickly recovered after the race. He was hugged by Ilsa who was sitting at the edge of the pool during the race, calling out the intermediate clockings to Jon.

En route to the half-mile mark, Jon also unofficially broke the Australian 440-yards record, by five seconds, clocking 4.32.5. But the mark will not be submitted for recognition, since it was only clocked with one stop watch, instead of three.

INCREDIBLE SWIMMER'

Coach Don Talbot said he did not think Jon would last the full distance, after hearing the quarter-mile clocking. "But he did last," he added, "he is an incredible swimmer."

Jon said he was "exhausted," but would overcome it and go all out in the 440 yards next Wednesday.

Ilsa and Jon received a terrific hand from the crowd when officials handed them their medals. The officials said it was the first time in swimming history that two members of the same family held world records.

Talbot said later he was "certain" that Jon would smash the 440-yards record. He also said Jon would become the first swimmer to better nine minutes for the half mile, "but not before next year. He's got plenty of time."

Vikings Nip Jayvees But Lead Evaporates

Victoria College Vikings struck early, then held on in the second half to nip the powerful UBC Jayvees, 75-72, in their exhibition basketball game at Victoria High School gym last night.

Vikings, who have been troubled this season through lack of good competition, had it to spare last night. The Jayvees, down by 20 points at one stage of the game, outscored the Vikings, 44-33, and were pressing at the end.

Doug Jennings and Ivor Bruhaug sparked the second-half rally for UBC. Jennings scored 16 of his 24 points in the second half, but his performance was matched by Tom English of the Vikings who finished the game with 26 points. Bruhaug wound up with 20, 12 in the second half.

Centre Bob Tomlinson scored 17 points from the pivot for Vikings in the first half, but was held to three after the intermission.

Port Alberni Rink Captures Island High School Honors

NANAIMO (Special)—Terry Miller's Port Alberni foursome won the Vancouver Island zone I finals and took the first gap toward the B.C. high school curling championship here yesterday with a 10-5 victory over Don Moss of Oak Bay in the final game of the round-robin competition.

Miller, who had Don Stevens throwing third rocks, Pete Arnet playing second and Bruce Spottiswood, lead, thereby advanced to the regional finals at Chilliwack next Saturday.

Winning team there goes to the provincial final, with the B.C. champion to compete in the annual Canadian high school bonspiel in Charlottetown, PEI, Feb. 13-15.

Four rinks — one each from Port Alberni, Victoria, Cowi-High in Duncan and Nanaimo—competed in yesterday's competition. All had won city titles.

Miller's rink started off with a 13-4 victory over Dave Alexander's Nanaimo foursome, then defeated Dave Gregory's Duncan rink, 10-4, to qualify for the final.

Moss, with Mark Trueman playing third, Pete Watson second and John Walker lead, defeated Gregory, 11-3, in his first game, and went on to down Alexander, 9-7.

EARLY LEAD

Moss went two up in the first end of the final, but Miller scored a four-ender in the second. After Moss scored one in the third, Miller counted two in the fourth and one in the fifth and sixth ends to go ahead, 8-3.

Moss came back to count one in the seventh and eighth, but Miller scored two in the ninth, and the 10th end was blanked.

Remember When:

New York Giants traded Rogers Hornsby, one of the game's great batters, to Boston Braves 30 years ago yesterday. The Giants obtained catcher Frank Hogan and outfielder Jimmy Welch in return for Hornsby in a move that startled the baseball world. Hornsby, later a tough manager, had won the National League's "most valuable player" award in 1925 with St. Louis and repeated in 1929 with Chicago.

City Soccer Stars Continue Mastery Over Mainland XIs

Victoria and District Football League all-stars yesterday provided the most convincing proof yet that if Victoria gets into the Pacific Coast Soccer League as expected, it can field a team that will give a good battle against the best the mainland has to offer.

All-Stars maintained their unbeaten streak against mainland competition with a convincing 3-1 victory over Sapperton Athletic at Royal Athletic Park.

Sapperton, a prominent Vancouver District League side, fielded a team boasting several players who saw action in the PCSL last season. Even so the mainland club never looked as dangerous as the Victoria side and failed to effectively pierce a strong defence.

All-Stars have now won two games and tied one against Vancouver district league teams.

From the start it was a fast, fairly even game, but centre-forward Bill Ackinclose gave the All-Stars an early lead when Tim Walker put over a superbly-placed centre to Ackinclose's head.

However, within five minutes Sapperton centre-forward Larry Crisp tied the score.

After that goal, the All-Stars pressed the attack and the forwards missed several good scoring opportunities before Ackinclose tallied again on a fine individual effort. Antol Major made it 3-1 before the half ended.

All-Stars made several substitutions in the second half, but the defences generally dominated play and neither side could score. Harry Carruthers played a standout game at centre-half for Victoria.

GAMES TODAY

Four games are scheduled today in the Victoria and District Football League. Only league-leading Brodie's Bakery is idle.

All games start at 2 p.m.

Victoria All-Stars: Al Young, Pete Moran, Bill Hamford, George Gurket, Harry Carruthers, Hal Stroyd, Dick Nellestijn, Joe Hillhouse, Bill Ackinclose, Tim Walker, Antol Major. Spare: Bill Abbott, Archie McMillan, Henry Vanderhorst, John Pickburn.

Sapperton Athletic Club: Pete Demmyrick, Dave McGregor, Charlie Thomson, Bill Moffatt, Ed Scott, Jim Logan, John Kastellen, Dave Guthrie, Larry Crisp, Stan Mullen, Jack Younger. Spare: George Mainwaring.

Speedy Wanderers Score Rugby Win

Oak Bay Wanderers, once again relying on superior speed in the three-line, defeated JBAA, 12-3, in their first-division Victoria Rugby Union match yesterday at upper Macdonald Park.

The game featured strong play by the forwards on both teams, but the faster Oak Bay backs made the difference in the clubs. Fullback Dick Ellis turned in a standout game for Wanderers, while Gordie Hemmingway and Ken Higgs stood out for JBAA.

Wanderers built up a 6-0 lead in the first half. Speedy winger Rafael Duke scored a try that went unconverted, and Ellis booted a penalty.

Doug Brown put JBAA back in the game with a penalty kick in the second half, but Colin Blyth scored a try from a line-out for Wanderers and Frank Berry completed scoring with a try on a three-line movement.

In yesterday's other match at Macdonald Park, Victoria College blanked JBAA seconds, 6-0. Roland Hawes booted a penalty kick and Rod Kirkham scored a try in the second half.

Alberta League to Experiment With International Puck Rules

By RICHARD ANCO

CALGARY (CP) — Alberta's Big Six Intermediate League is starting out on an experiment this week prompted by Eastern Canada fans who raved about the style of play of the Russian selects when they met Canadian teams under International hockey rules last fall.

The seven-team league beginning with two games Tuesday is adopting the stricter and gentler regulations of the International Ice Hockey Federation for the remainder of its regular season. It is the first league in Canada to do so.

Already interest is mounting both in the East and West With the new rules improve the [illegible] for attraction a prominent in amateur leagues today?

Keep Its Feet Dry

By M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS

BEAR'S BREECH — (WP) Glen Lake: Your plant of Acanthus mollis or Bear's Breech should survive the winter outdoors even though your district is something of a frost pocket. It is absolutely sure the plant is not a drought spot where no puddles stand during the winter rains.

Acanthus can stand quite a period of dry frost but perish miserably in a damp freeze. The ideal situation would be on a bed raised a few inches above the surrounding terrain with a winter mulch of leafy peat moss over the roots.

Your Chinese Sacred Lily can be grown in pots of rather small size although the more usual way is to set them in a bowl of pebbles and water. I would advise putting them outside after flowering as they are not reliably hardy here. If it were, them in a sunny window would suffer and fail once the leaves naturally die away in the autumn. Keep in the cool and dry during the winter months.

HEDGING PLANTS — [illegible] reliable hedging plants you could use [illegible] the common Privet or one of the Hollies. There is really a choice [illegible] ing system at a cost somewhere around $... per 100 [illegible]

Cunningham & Walsh, the advertising agency, has published a report on the first decade of television in that average-sized and terribly average community which it calls Videotown and which its inhabitants call New Brunswick, N.J. Theoretically, Videotown's television habits pretty accurately reflect your television habits and therefore these annual reports have been awaited with interest and even some nervousness.

LETTER FROM LONDON — By Richard L. Thomas

Drury Lane Banks $1,000,000 For Show Not Due 'Til Spring

ONE OF THE MINOR WONDERS of the world is "My Fair Lady." It doubtless has George Bernard Shaw revolving in his grave, but it has Drury Lane Theatre in a state of ecstasy. The show does not open in London until April 30, but already the theatre has taken the equivalent of a million dollars in advance booking.

It is not quite true to say—as some have—that the show is completely sold out for a year ahead, but it is true to say that there are very few seats available at ordinary prices and all the best ones have been sold. Regular patrons will not be surprised to hear that the price geography of the theatre has been changed.

Ordinarily the five or six rows of the stalls are priced at £1 and from there on decrease 5/- (70 cents) per row. My Fair Lady is asking and getting £2 for the first seven rows and these prices go back to the normal £1 only at row M. So far the price of most seats has been raised 5/- across the board—a modest boost in the Drury Lane management.

Drury Lane will have the same producers as New York — they were Herman Levin at Roxy, Hot Spot, Little Abner and Silk Stockings. Hazel Bruce and the theatre itself are also likely to make higher profits than the 10 per cent they have bought Cassart seats for every performance and they have the inhibitions about selling tickets for what they can get. Five months before the first London performance they were asking and getting $6 (twice the price of the most expensive seat in the house) for seats which will be like where the choice seats is anybody's guess.

A sidelight on the New York popularity of this show is that Americans abroad to get seats for "My Fair Lady" in New York were worried about getting them. Many arranged to have the tickets sent c.o.d.

* * *

When Drury Lane was a mere 18 months old it was burned down and the accounts say that the costs to the proprietors, Garrick and Lacy, amounted to £35,000. Of course, at today's values that would be many times that amount. Despite the devotees being prepared to pay more than ever for seats, the big expense remains the salaries.

Cheaper seating could have been arranged, but the management wants to keep the theatre for the better class of patron. Even the gallery seats are expensive, and the pit is the most expensive in London.

The present theatre has been standing since 1812, but there was a theatre on the site for 100 years before that. Many of the stage traditions go back to the days of Garrick and Sheridan. The present theatre is the fourth to be built on the site.

* * *

In an attempt to reduce the number of theatre queues, where there are more than 1,000 people camping out for a play, the Arts Council is appointing a booking agency to sell tickets for the three operatic institutions and the Royal Shakespeare Company. The agency will be run on a computerized system.

It may be a good way to avoid a lot of queuing, but it will also take the spirit out of the occasional enthusiast who likes to get up early and queue for a ticket. Everything gets a little more commercialized and I have a feeling that the most interesting people for the theatre will be put off by the extra effort in getting a ticket under this system.

* * *

Sir Thomas Beecham, who knows more about opera than anyone in Britain, has been appointed to the Arts Council. He is pictured as saying that Covent Garden is a "white elephant" and should be sold for commercial development. The present theatre has been standing since 1812, but there was a theatre on the site for 100 years before that. Many of the stage traditions go back to the days of Garrick and Sheridan. The present theatre is the fourth to be built on the site.

* * *

Many people think that the Arts Council should be abolished. Others think that it should be given more money. Sir Thomas is one of the latter. He is quoted as saying that the Council's grant of £1,500,000 a year is "a drop in the ocean" and that it should be increased to £5,000,000 a year.

* * *

Whether the Council will get more money or not is still in the air, but the Government has announced that the number of medical students will be increased by 25 per cent by 1970. This means that after 1970 more doctors will be graduating than ever before.

RED LID BLOWN OFF

This is the fourth instalment of the famed Royal Canadian Mounted Police story by Alan Phillips, THE LIVING LEGEND

WHEN RUSSIA entered the war the Canadian Communists emerged with their line abruptly changed. ("As Canadians, it is our duty to support the battle of democracy against fascism.") As a sign of sincerity Russia pretended to disband the Internationl. The Communist party of Canada changed its name to the Labor-Progressive party. Under the surface, however, activity intensified and in 1945 the cover of secrecy was lifted for a clear look at the appartus beneath.

Mounted detachment which made a colorful contribution to the Coronation ceremonies for Elizabeth II was commanded by a former Victorian, Assistant Commissioner Douglas McGibbon, now retired. Proud in tradition proud in history, men of the RCMP continue to serve with distinction across the nation.

In the evening of Sept. 5 in the capital city of Ottawa cipher clerk Igor Gouzenko pinned some documents under his shirt and walked out of the sinister-uttered Russian embassy. He was disillusioned with Russia after two years in Canada and he knew that his chief, Colonel Nicolai Zabotin, suspected his feelings. Like the porters and the chauffeur Gouzenko was also a Red army officer, trained in intelligence work. He had carefully selected the documents to prove that the embassy was the centre of a huge spy ring.

Gouzenko went first to the Ottawa [illegible] ordered right away, showed all his papers, [illegible] Russian. "The police [illegible] to go is the RCMP," he said. With the year's hottest news story under his shirt Gouzenko left the newsroom and walked home to the apartment where he lived with his wife and child. He believed he had only a few more hours before the papers would be missed.

SHUFFLED ABOUT

Next morning Gouzenko called at the justice building. His English was not very good. He was misdirected to the identification branch where Inspector Henry Buteman, after misunderstanding, shuttled him to Crown Attorney Raoul Mercier. Mercier's secretary called Norman Robertson, head of external affairs. Mackenzie King was waiting. Robertson said and phoned the prime minister.

Mackenzie King was just hanging up his coat in the House of Commons, where the fall session was awaiting him to begin. His reaction was to send Gouzenko back to the embassy. He didn't know if the documents were genuine. It would never have been the first time that an agent provocateur had forged papers to create an international incident.

But [illegible] Gouzenko [illegible] returned home. He expected an attempt on his life that night. He told his story to a neighbor who took the family into her apartment. Another neighbor called the city police [illegible] Words started [illegible] "Check your [illegible] you must [illegible]

The incident lent weight to Gouzenko's story. The RCMP took over Sept. [illegible] and his family [illegible] headquarters.

Only four original cablegrams which Gouzenko was supposed to have burned, could be checked immediately. They were enough. They showed that the Russians had [illegible] matters that only Britain and Canada should have known.

Will Canada Help Create the Bonds Which Will Tie Japan to Democracy?

By GEORGE COWLEY

TRADE or TRAGEDY?

This is the concluding article of two in series which Mr. Cowley titled "Japan at the Crossroads." Last week in The Islander he discussed the elements, political and economic which may drive Japan into the arms of China's red Mao Tse-tung and Moscow and its satellites. Here he develops the argument for a closer commercial relationship between Canada and her trans Pacific neighbor.

THERE ARE SOLUTIONS to the crises facing Japan in 1958, her year of decision, solutions that could keep her in the Western camp, even maintain the democratic gains inherited from her postwar occupation. Whether she accepts them, or chooses an alternative road disastrous for the West, will depend largely on the amount of sympathetic help given by the West itself.

Within Japan, it must be conceded that democracy, or at least the liberalism essential to a Canadian type of democracy, remains confined mostly to the intellectual levels of society, and has not taken hold among the masses. Traditions of individual subordination to the family and to the social conscience, including the tyranny of the fear of "losing face," preclude development of a universal democracy. The rule of law continues to come second to the obligations of kinship and social custom.

But this does not necessarily [illegible] in an age of spu[tnik]s and ICBMs. And indeed [illegible] been a boom in new [illegible] and movies not ashamed [illegible] to portray past glories of the [illegible] a resurrection of fig[illegible] and passage with past [illegible] the move to restore [illegible] the teaching of patriotism in [illegible]

In which phase of Japanese [illegible] will the new Japan turn [illegible] the present? [illegible] the road feudal [illegible] the national aberrations [illegible] a genuine transformation from [illegible]

In the First World War the Japanese people fought beside Great Britain and her allies. In the Second World War they cost the western democracies a tragic loss in life and treasure, fighting beside the totalitarian powers. Now they are torn between a real desire for friendship with the West and opportunity for markets in the East. Which way will Hirohito's people turn?

SCARS GO DEEP

But the Meiji Restoration [illegible] section of the moderate Socialists [illegible] which have acted on the left as West Mansfield was [illegible] personal liberties developed [illegible] and deeds [illegible] This was a [illegible] period of conquest and expansion [illegible] but the humility of utter defeat by a proud people has left scars deeper [illegible] than [illegible] visible but scars so deep that [illegible] may never again be taken more seriously by the Japanese than the wars of [illegible] and beliefs are taken by Canadians.

COMMUNISTS DISCREDITED

With this defeat [illegible] Japanese. As before the [illegible] and the colonial [illegible] to decide the political [illegible] of the country. It will be a disciplined and limited democracy [illegible] one which can accommodate the ideas and traditions of Japanese society [illegible] and fostering [illegible] strength for its own survival.

Even among leftist elements in Japan there are signs that support would be forthcoming for careful moderation in future planning. Disarming Socialists extremist tactics, Sohyo workers have already joined more conservative unions. Communist excesses, particularly in their recent fraudulent acquiring of funds by infiltrating commercial organizations, have discredited the entire left, and government repression of labor "struggles" has so far remained within constitutional limits and been cast by many in terms of [illegible]

But [illegible] of public [illegible] of Communist [illegible] of the country [illegible] over the Japanese mind of [illegible] of Communist [illegible] of [illegible] cause utterly dependent on the [illegible] of the Japanese [illegible] economy [illegible] dependent on Japan's [illegible] use economic weapons [illegible] dependent on Japan's [illegible] with the rest of the democracies. And in this [illegible] the West can [illegible] to [illegible]

The vigor and industry of the Japanese people are nowhere better illustrated than in the astonishing recovery made from wartime destruction. In [illegible] Japan [illegible] of which we may be proud but never [illegible] the Japanese [illegible] the West at best [illegible] Japan [illegible] and [illegible] we refused to [illegible] The experience [illegible] and we could do a lot worse than to [illegible] Japan's [illegible] as we sell. Not without Japan embracing the Communist economy [illegible] unless present Western sentiments are radically altered.

FIRST INDIAN IN A B.C. PUBLIC SCHOOL

Canute of the Cowichans Talks of Another Century

* * *

By N. P. DOUGAN

* * *

TO THE Cowichan Indian, Canute Leeme Cleeston, according to local legend, belongs the distinction of having been the first child of pure Indian extraction to attend a public school in this province.

Canute was past 80 when composed and dignified, he stood on the school platform, leaning slightly on his cane, and told the people of his school days under schoolmaster W. H. Lomas, in the 70s and early 80s.

Here is Canute, as a young man, driving a load of hay past the old church. He and his wife remembered and recognized the scene, close by Comiaken Hill where "the old people" took the hay crop without knives or scythes and thereby gave the place its name

In His Retirement, Charles Smith Has His Own Museum

By Cecil Clark

ARMS HIS HOBBY, FROM BOOMERANG TO BLOWGUN

TALL, QUIET-SPOKEN, bespectacled, 69-year-old Charles P. Smith is the kind of person you'd expect to see acting as curator of a museum. Which, in a way, he is. He's curator of his own museum which takes in the top floor of his house at 141 Howe Street.

First a word about Mr. Smith before we explore the museum. Liverpool-born Charles Smith left as an apprentice for the sea at the age of 16. He sailed before the mast in the days when Cape Horners gybed around the Horn and not through the Panama Canal. He sailed in the Merchant Service of half the countries of the world and has a fund of yarns about the lands he has visited.

He left the sea in 1914 and settled in Victoria. He married and has a family of four boys and two girls, now grown up and married. He was a member of the Victoria Police Force for 30 years, retiring in 1944 as a sergeant.

His collection of arms and armour began when he was a boy in Liverpool. He has been adding to it ever since.

Another curiosity was a six-barrelled pistol of similar design from Nebraska, the U.S. It was used in the hunting to fire enough lead pellets to kill a moose. Only six barrels are known to exist.

To take it in a completely different vein, there is a pair of duelling pistols in the museum. I suppose I was fascinated by the workmanship and by the thought of the men who had used them.

'There Is Work I Can Do' City Girl Going to India

By EILEEN LEAROYD

There is a certain kind of beauty which transcends race or upbringing.

Miss Nicky Lall, a City Hall typist, is a living example of this beauty. Wearing a colorful sari, attractive appearance and a perfect command of English, she is a credit to Canada.

Lovely as Anglo-Saxon girls, typical of the land, with exciting smile and members of one of many races found famous everywhere.

LOVELY DARK EYES

She is small in stature, has jet black curling tresses, lovely dark eyes of the type that make a man look at her twice.

The poise typical of Eastern women is noticeable in her every movement. Her soft voice is pleasant to the ear.

Miss Lall is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lall, [illegible] Mr. Lall came to Canada from India [illegible] Victoria, where he married Miss [illegible] Victoria.

Nicky was born here, educated here. Later she studied in India, psychology and business administration at Agra University and at the same time she speaks Hindustani and Hindustani and has been to the two countries in India. [illegible] a couple of months with the parents of those living in Calcutta, India.

Miss Lall's ambition is soon to be realized for she has been accepted by the External Affairs Department to work as a Canadian in the government office at New Delhi.

LEAVES SON

She expects to make her new home for a year or two with Canada, but she hopes to see her son [illegible] to see good [illegible] and to see the interesting sights of the East.

Miss Lall has six brothers and [illegible] she is the only girl in the family. Her brothers are all married and live in Victoria.

Miss Lall's husband [illegible] Victoria, where he is employed as a [illegible] Lall is also employed in the [illegible] Lall is a graduate of [illegible] Victoria.

Smoky Joe Earns His Keep

By Harry Young

Positively the last impression that should be created from this article is that the writer is posing as an authority.

The theory of smoking salmon is something for the birds or deer fishing fans with years of kippering experience behind them. We have managed after a very few attempts to produce a kippered salmon that indulgent friends say is not only edible but really delectable.

We sort of reckon lots of people get put off the idea of smoking salmon because (1) equipment required, (2) smoke salmon to neighbors, (3) eternal vigilance on the part of the smoker.

HARRY YOUNG

COMES A TIME

However most folk who fish for salmon in these parts find that sometime or other in the season they run into a glut of fish that becomes a positive embarrassment.

There comes a time when even the nicest of wives says "No more smoked salmon for lunch is tonight's menu" or some such remark.

OVEN RACKS BEST

SALT AND SUGAR

TEMPERATURE TRICK

It has to be properly filleted of course and we did best with fish over 10 pounds in weight.

The original method of dropping the fillets in brine for about half an hour had one disadvantage. It made the fish soft and easily broken when smoked.

My friend George Baron who is not only a great mining prospector but an expert on such things as living in the woods passed the hint that instead of using brine we should keep the fillets dry sprinkling them with two parts of coarse salt and one part of soft brown sugar.

We use a shore stock and after about five or six hours according to the temperature the sugar-salt will have dissolved and the fillets will be lying in a cold, brown juice.

They should be hung up to drip before being placed in the smoke box.

The time has to be varied from different types of wood. I have had good results using green maple while alder and hardwood from any of these trees is good. Avoid resinous woods like fir.

The fish is hung up in the smoke box and the door closed. Then the fire is started. Use a small fire at first and keep it that way for about two hours. Then you can increase the heat a little but for not more than another two hours.

The whole affair can be left unattended.

OVEN RACKS BEST

The improvement in racks is where the fish must be used. After some experimenting with placing the fish on oven racks they inclined to break off, we used open mesh wire netting and placed the fish on pieces of cardboard cut to the right size. This has the added advantage of being easy to get rid of.

The main art of the business is to make sure that the fish is properly prepared. Any one that way.

TV TALK

By Bruce Lowther

WEEK'S PREVIEW: The Liberal convention has to be considered the most important show starting with the St. Laurent farewell Tuesday and continuing with elections and resolutions the next two days. Apart from politics the most TV entertainment is on Sunday, [illegible] started Bing Crosby golf tourney and comedy, Shirley Temple's first TV fairy tale and a CBC Close-up of Mike Wallace. Cut-Price Job Suspect—Strachan

Did Gaglardi's Name Sway Building Firms?

NANAIMO (CP)—CCF leader Robert Strachan says he wonders whether construction and supply firms which provided low-cost labor and materials for Highways Minister Gaglardi's new church in Kamloops did so "because he was building a church or because he is the minister of highways."

Mr. Gaglardi, a minister of the Pentecostal Assemblies of Canada, estimated his newly-opened church was worth $150,000 but was built for half that amount because of volunteer labor and material supplied at cost or wholesale prices.

"If they are donating low-cost materials for the building of a church, then are they willing to make similar allowance for other similar projects?" Mr. Strachan asked in an interview.

He said Christ Church Cathedral in Victoria had been trying for years to launch a building program and "there are dozens of other churches in B.C. that would appreciate this kind of assistance."

"However, if the firms provided low-cost materials because it was Mr. Gaglardi, as highways minister, who was building a church then why can't they grant similar concessions to his department, which is supposed to be low on funds?

"We would certainly see a lot more people put to work if they did."

Tilden Rally In March

Plans now are being made for the "biggest little convention in Victoria's centennial year," the Tilden convention in March.

About 150 delegates from all major cities in Canada will attend the three-day convention on March 10, 11 and 12 at the Empress Hotel, and most of the delegates and their wives are expected to stay three more days for the post-convention activities.

Among the delegates will be Samuel F. Tilden, president of the Canadian U-drive car firm.

Post-convention activities have been designed to give the visitors a good look at Victoria and lower Vancouver Island.

Officials hope to include a tour of naval establishments in the program. Also planned is a trip to the Butchart Gardens, a trip to Genoa Bay and up Island towns and a free day when delegates can shop, fish, golf or make their own tour.

Program is being made up by Jack Hawthorne of National Motors' Drive Yourself, the Tilden agency in Victoria.

Memo to Mr. Thomson:

Victoria, VICTORIA Is Capital of B.C.

Canada Weekly Review, an English paper devoted to Canadian affairs and published by Roy Thomson, made the traditional "boob" when it came to printing an issue on B.C.'s centenary recently.

A picture of Vancouver is captioned: "Capital of British Columbia." But the error was caught before too many copies were printed and the caption changed to "Canada's great Pacific port" well before publication commissioner George Warren spotted it.

Publisher Thomson also owns a large chain of small town papers across Canada including dailies at Nanaimo, Kamloops, Kelowna and Penticton in B.C.

Mr. Warren learned of the error and correction in a letter from W. A. McAdam, B.C. agent-general in London, who wrote an article on the province's economy for the issue.

"It's comforting to know we have good friends in London," Mr. Warren smiled.

Thetis Lake Park

Plant Sanctuary 'Friends' Sought

Victoria's newly-formed Thetis Lake Park Association, which aims at the establishment of a plant sanctuary at Thetis Lake Park, is seeking support for its plans.

President Ed. Lohbrunner said last night a letter was being sent to all organizations which might be interested in the aims of the association, asking them to appoint delegates to attend a meeting Feb. 27.

"A number of organizations have already told us they want to help," he said. "We have asked them to send a representative to our next meeting."

The meeting will discuss ways and means of achieving the association's aim to have part of Thetis Lake Park set aside and protected as a plant sanctuary and creation of a botanical garden.

"This would prove invaluable for education purposes," Mr. Lohbrunner said, "particularly when Victoria College becomes a university."

Calling for foresight on behalf of city council, Mr. Lohbrunner pointed out that Vancouver Parks Board was now buying built-in land near Kitsilano district for parks.

"We are particularly interested in preserving the Garry Oak and the plants naturally associated with it," he said. "So far as we know the stand in Thetis Lake Park is the only wholly natural one left in B.C."

Polio Drive Volunteers Needed

About 3,000 to 3,500 mothers will be needed for the one-hour drive in 38 areas including Sooke.

Anyone willing to volunteer for the march, between 6.30 and 7.30 p.m., should call the fund office at 5-6748.

Vic-Van-Isle Kinsmen are in charge of the campaign, sponsored by Kinsmen Clubs throughout B.C.

This year, the Kinsmen hope to raise $45,000 in the drive. The money is used for treatment of handicapped children in B.C. and for continuing care of polio victims.

Why Didn't Russians Keep Sputniks Dark?

VANCOUVER (CP)—A leading Canadian scientist says Russia may have made a strategic blunder in launching the Sputniks.

Firing of the two Soviet satellites into outer space awakened the West to the peril it faced as a result of Russian scientific advances, in the view of Dr. Gordon Shrum, head of the University of British Columbia physics department.

WOKE UP WEST

"Why they launched them I don't know," Dr. Shrum, who also heads the B.C. Research Council, told a crowd of 2,300 who filled Vancouver's Georgia Auditorium for the official opening of UBC's $7,500,000 building fund drive.

"If they hadn't, we might all still have been asleep."

Seven scientists took part in a panel discussion on the state of Canadian education. They agreed that the country faces a desperate shortage of professional workers, and warned that the shortage will become far more critical unless universities are greatly expanded.

The panel of scientists, introduced by Dr. Shrum, who acted as moderator, were:

Dr. J. S. Foster, McGill physics professor and director of Canada's only cyclotron; Dr. W. B. Lewis, vice-president and director of Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd., Chalk River; Dr. ence; Dr. C. A. McDowell, head G. A. Woonton, director of the of UBC's chemistry department, Eaton electronics laboratory at and Dr. F. A. Forward, head of McGill; Dean H. C. Gunning, UBC mining and metallurgy de of UBC's faculty of applied sci partment.

Ottawa Takes Over

The federal government has taken full responsibility for the control and eradication of brucellosis on Vancouver Island and in the West Kootenay, Pemberton-Sechelt and McBride districts.

Provincial Agriculture Minister Newton P. Steacy said the move was a significant step forward in the program to eradicate brucellosis from all cattle herds of the province.

Shortly after he took office late last year Mr. Steacy said the only reason the brucellosis eradication program had not been extended by the provincial government was due to the fact he had not been the minister.

Mr. Steacy said yesterday his department will co-operate fully with federal officials to ensure that the changeover from provincial authority is "effected as smoothly as possible."

Let's talk REAL ESTATE
By Jack Mears

"How To Go About Buying a House"
And what happens when you have found the home that suits you. The first step is to make an offer through the Agent with whom you are dealing.
Now all legal offers have to be made in writing and should be accompanied by a deposit. The Agent will give you a standard form to which is filled out the description of the property, the amount of the deposit, the balance of the down payment and details of mortgages existing or to be arranged.
Next on the form comes a text which states that the price "shall include the following" and here should be listed any extras which you expect to be included. It is most important that these should be properly listed as otherwise they are not in the contract.
The form then goes on into details as to adjustments of taxes, insurance premiums, water rates, and etc. The date of possession and for how long the offer is to remain open. When all the details have been filled out and signed by you, the Agent will take it to the Vendor and endeavor to obtain an acceptance.
An important point to remember is that you can withdraw your offer at any time up to the time it is accepted by the Vendor, but that once he has signed accepting your offer it is binding, and you have bought a home.
You should now see that it is properly insured, make arrangements for the final documents to be drawn, and to move in and enjoy it.

Indians Keep Land

NANAIMO (CP)—Members of Nanaimo Indian band have voted against leasing 3.5 acres of No. 1 reserve to the Mayo Logging Company as part of a proposed $500,000 development project.

Reason for the adverse vote is believed to hinge on a lease appraisal obtained by the department of Indian affairs.

A spokesman for the Nanaimo band said the lease value was set by a Victoria appraiser at $1,500 annually for a 20-year period. The lease would be open for negotiation every five years with an option for renewal.

Rajindi Mayo, president of Mayo logging, indicated in outlining details of the project Dec. 11 that his company could get by without the reserve land, on which it intended to establish an assembly yard.

But What Stalled Cars?

'Death Rays' Just Radar

DOVER, England (Reuters)—A wooden pylon 250 feet high which caused wartime rumors of a secret death ray was destroyed Friday by government order.

The pylon was one of four erected in great secrecy early in the war as part of Britain's radar screen.

Rumors spread that Britain had discovered a secret ray to beat the German bombers.

The rumors were strengthened by a surprising number of motorists driving along the lonely coastal road who found their car engines stalled when they passed the pylons.

Gossip multiplied the number of stopped cars by 10—and Britons thrilled to the thought a secret ray was defending them.

The third of the pylons was blown up Friday by a charge of explosives. The fourth and last will continue to be used by the BBC for television relays.

The air ministry pronounced this epitaph for the pylons Friday: "Radar never stopped a motor car engine. It was just one of those things."

But the ministry could not explain why so many autos broke down near the pylons in those early war days.

Wooed Sitter

'Baby' Sued

BELFAST (AP) — A former baby was sued for damages Thursday on a charge of enticing his one-time babysitter away from her husband.

Robert King, 41, asked £250 in a legal action, against the ex-baby, Neil Dunseith, now 21.

King said his wife, now 36, used to baby-sit with Neil 18 years ago for his parents who lived next door. As the boy grew older, King related, the relationship changed into a romance, and his wife left him with Dunseith.

BERT THOMAS

Big Bert Has Plans

Bert Thomas, first man to swim between Port Angeles and Victoria, says he is going to go back to the icy Juan de Fuca Strait this week.

He said in a phone conversation from Port Angeles yesterday he will start training this week for four major swims this year.

The first will be a swim "in the Pacific Northwest area" sometime before April, he said. Second is one in Lake Superior, then one near San Francisco, then a crack at the English Channel in August or September, he said.

'Wish You Were Here'

Teetotal Car Writes Home

MONTREAL (CP) — Leon C. Boussard has apparently come up against one of those thieves among whom there is both honor and humor.

Boussard, chief information officer for the International Aviation Organization here, had his Mercedes-Benz car stolen Christmas Eve.

And his Christmas cheer—a case of rum and a case of sherry—was inside it.

Several days later Boussard got this telegram, collect, from Quebec City: "Having wonderful time. Wish you were here. Signed, Mercedes."

Police recovered the car and the case was closed. So were the two cases inside. Not a drop had been taken.

Cameron's 'Friend' Identified

Victim Confirms Account Of RCMP 'Red' Investigation

NANAIMO (CP)—A. A. (Rod) Glen, unsuccessful CCF candidate for Nanaimo in the 1956 British Columbia provincial election, Saturday identified himself as the "friend" referred to in Parliament by Colin Cameron as having undergone RCMP investigation.

Mr. Cameron, CCF member for Nanaimo, told the Commons Friday in criticizing RCMP investigation methods that the friend, his "financial agent" in the 1953 general election, had been checked for Communist affiliations.

He said the two RCMP officers who conducted the investigation were "political and ideological innocents . . . babes in arms . . . incapable of assessing if there were Communist affiliation."

Mr. Cameron said it was an "intolerable" situation. He said the probe was made at the request of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

In an interview here, Mr. Glen said the matter arose following discussion of a resolution concerning foreign trade at a B.C. Credit Union League meeting in Nanaimo in 1952. One resolution tabled then was from an organization believed to have had Communist sympathies.

He said a similar resolution came up at a meeting in Pittsburgh and reference was made to the Nanaimo meeting.

An FBI agent investigated and as a result a number of members of the B.C. Credit Union's board of directors were subjected to scrutiny, Mr. Glen has been a director of the league since 1951 and is currently its president.

He said he has learned from the RCMP that all suspects have been cleared.

He said that at no time has he been interviewed by RCMP, and it was "disconcerting to hear reports of the activity . . . especially when I had no knowledge of the basis for investigation."

Mr. Glen said he had never been associated with Communist organizations.

"I have been forced into denying things of which I was never guilty in the first place."

Clergy To Map Drive

Two supper meetings this week of ministers and lay leaders will lay the ground work for a concerted "sector" fund-raising campaign among a number of Victoria churches.

Culmination of a 10-week period of preparation will be visits to all member congregations on a "stewardship" Sunday in March.

In Victoria to direct and advise drive leaders is Rev. W. J. H. Smyth, counsellor from the Canadian Council of Churches and western secretary of the United Church's mission and maintenance department.

Rev. Douglas Pilkey, minister of Esquimalt United Church, has rallied from 10 to 12 churches in Victoria to the unified campaign plan with an invitation to interested ministers and general chairmen to meet at the YWCA Monday at 6 p.m.

First training dinner is scheduled for Wednesday at 6.30 p.m. in Metropolitan United Church.

Rev. Smyth, of Saskatoon, was in charge of five sector drives in western Canada, counselling unified drives for a total of 75 churches in Winnipeg, Regina, Saskatoon, Edmonton and Calgary.
